THE FIGHT IS ON.

Hoosier Republicans and the Legislature.

Many Candidates After the Offices.

Justus C. Adams Leads in the Speakership Race.

The Contest for This and Other Positions Is an Animated One—Getting Ready for the Session.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan 7.—Fourteen years of almost uninterrupted control of the legislative patronage by the democrats have made the republicans exceedingly hungry, and now that the opportunity is presented to feed again at the public crib, every office within the gift of the general assembly is being sought after by from six to a dozen candidates, there being hardly a county in the state that is not represented in the rush for party preferment at the hands of the coming majority caucus. Each of the officers to be nominated will have several appointments to make, and the army that is hovering around for the subordinate positions and attempting to secure promises from candidates that appear to have the inside track is so large that no one has yet had the hardihood to attempt a census of their numbers.

There are probably thirty subordinate positions to be filled in the two bodies, and it is no exaggeration to say that 300 republicans are waiting and watching for these positions Many of the candidates, taking advantage of this situation, have made promises right and left in the event of their nomination by the caucus and these promises have brought to their assistance a strong influence which is working vigorously for their election. Some of the aspirants, knowing that more promises have been made than there are positions to be filled, have pledged their support to two or more candidates for the same office and the situation has become so clouded by the doubtful attitude of both workers and candidates that it is hard to form a reasonable conjecture as to the outcome in many contests.

There is every reason to believe, however, that Justus C. Adams, of this city, will be nominated for speaker of the house, though for this position, as well as others, there are several candidates. The friends of Adams are willing to sacrifice everything else for the speakership and have pledged themselves not to ask for anything else for this county if the officer of speaker is conferred on Adams The reason for this lies in the fact that Adams stands cheek by jowl with the local politicians and with what is known as the Harrison machine and is pledged to every measure that they have proposed. He is in favor of taking the appointing power away from the governor and wants such a reorganization of the benevolent and penal boards of the state as will give control of those institutions to the republican party. He has promised his support to all party measures that may come before the legislature and the local and state managers are working unreservedly and openly for him.

W. H. Leedy, a well known business man, but in no sense a politician, is a candidate also from this county. He stands high with the business element and would make an excellent presiding officer, being quiet and unassuming and disposed to be fair in all matters. He is wanting in political foresight, however, for in announcing his candidacy for the speakership he also announced that he was opposed to robbing the executive of the patronage. This was his death knell as far as the contest for speaker was concerned. His vote is doubtless the only one that he will get from the delegation of six representatives in this county.

There are several other candidates, but F. D. Merritt, of Lagrange county; J. G. Allen, of Daviess, and J. F. Statesman, of Miami, are the most aggressive and about the only ones that will have any following outside of the Indianapolis candidates. These are arraying against Adams all the prejudice that exists against a candidate believed to be the choice of a machine, as well as the prejudice that naturally exists on account of his location. This county has the reputation of wanting the best of everything that is being distributed, and when Adams was brought out for speaker his candidacy was in line with the oft repeated charge. There is prejudice against him on this account, and some of the local party workers, who want subordinate appointments, are disgruntled over the announcement that nothing but the speakership will be asked for if it is accorded to this county. They say that the party managers were not authorized to make any such pledges, and the fight has become so warm that Adams, himself, has been compelled to repudiate the statement. There is little doubt, though, that the legislature will hold the managers to the agreement should Adams be nominated.

Robert A. Brown, editor of the Franklin Democrat, seems to hold the cards for the principal clerkship of the house. He was a candidate for reporter of the supreme court at the recent state convention and came within a few votes of being nominated. His race was just close enough to make him sore over his defeat, and it is said that the legislative clerkship was promised him in order to hold him in line during the campaign. This, however, is no doubt an "invention of the enemy," for Brown's republicanism has been of the fiery brand, and there is no room in any other party for him. Editing a paper in a county where the majority is against him, he has done good work for the party, and his selection as clerk will be a deserved compliment. Benjamin Prather, of this city, and James Payne, of Connerville, are candidates against him, but the former will drop out of the race the moment Adams is nominated All indications now point to the selection of Brown by the caucus, though the opposition is doing a creditable work against him

R B. Oglesbee, of Marshall County, has the call for the principal secretaryship of the senate. He is a member of the republican state central committee and has long been known as a hard party worker. Captain Gowdy, the redoubtable chairman of the state central committee, and, in fact, all the party managers are working for Oglesbee, and this gives him a prestige with the country members that could not be overcome. There were several candidates when it was first learned that the senate would be republican, but al save Oglesbee have now dropped out, and the race is regarded a certainty. D. H. Olive, of Boone county, and W H. Ennis, of Gibson, are the two most aggressive candidates for the assistant secretaryship of the senate, they have succeeded in making the fight a warm one Ennis presumed too much upon the name of his opponent, whom he expected to see waving the branch of peace when the fight came on, but he soon learned his error, and Olive armed himself with burning brands and entered the fray as if he had been anxious all the time for some foe worthy of his steel Some of the friends of the two aspirants are looking to the entrance of a third party into the race, as so much is being said that a third candidate would find a hearty support. The caucuses of both parties will be held Wednesday night and the selections by the democrats will be made without a struggle. The party has nothing but an empty honor to bestow, and it is not that class that awakens either strife or enthusiasm.

THE POPE'S DECREE

Is Read in the Catholic Churches at Boston.

Catholics are Forbidden From Being Members of Different Secret Societies.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 7.—Archbishop John Williams has sent out the following letter to be read in all the churches of the diocese in Boston:

"BOSTON, Dec. 26, 1894.

"Archbishop of Boston

"REVEREND DEAR SIR:—We learn by letter from Rome, forwarded by His Excellency, the apostolic delegate at Washington, Most Holy Father has forbidden all Catholics to join the societies of Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias or Sons of Temperance. As to those who have already joined any of these societies they are to be admonished to withdraw from them, and if they refuse to do so, they are to be denied the sacraments

"Yours sincerely,

[signed] "JOHN B WILLIAMS,
"Archbishop of Boston."

TO CHANGE INSURANCE LAWS.

Terre Haute Property Owners Prepare Three Bills.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Jan. 7.—At a meeting of some of the largest property owners of this city with the representatives in the legislature from this county three bills to be introduced in that body this week were agreed upon. One is to declare invalid the provision in insurance policies which requires the insured to carry insurance to the amount of 80 per cent. of the value of the property to secure payment of the face value of the policy in case of total fire loss. Another is to amend the law which provides that a foreign company must have $200,000 paid-up capital stock to do business in the state. It is proposed to make the amount $100 000 The third is to amend the laws so that an Indiana company may be able to do insurance business as inexpensively as an outside company. Within the past year there has been a general increase in the cost of insurance and the people are resenting it.

Strike Broken.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 7.—The 119 inch mill at the Homestead steel works is working today and the strike at that place is broken. The mass meeting proposed for yesterday was not held. A crowd of four hundred men gathered but there were no speakers. All the furnaces at the Edgar Thompson works at Braddock are also working and the steel mill will resume tomorrow in all departments.

Short in His Accounts.

GALLIP, N. M. Jan. 7.—Wm Bowers, town marshal, has not been murdered as was feared, but has fled the country. A shortage in his account has been discovered and it is alleged the military authorities were about to take him for deserting the army.

Store Burned.

DUBOIS, Pa., Jan. 7.—The large general store of Bell, Lewis & Cates, the coal operators, burned here with a loss of $75,000. The company's miners are out on a strike and it is believed that the fire was of incendiary origin.

NOTABLE MURDER TRIAL

Begun in the Criminal Court at Indianapolis.

Winifred Smith, Who Spent a Fortune in Dissipation, Arraigned for the Murder of Weston Thomas.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan 7.—Winifred B Smith, was arraigned in the criminal court this morning for the murder of Weston B. Thomas. The regular jury was brought in and the special venire of the forty men called. The case will probably not go to the jury until some time next week.

The case is one of the most notable in the criminal calendar of Indianapolis for many years.

Smith is twenty five years of age, of good family and is a step son of Dr Wands, one of the leading citizens of the state. Smith, although surrounded by the best of influences, had a tendency to go wild and was for some time known about town as a fast young man. Since arriving at the age of twenty-one he has spent a good sized fortune, left by his father, in dissipation.

Smith killed Weston B. Thomas on Thursday morning July 12 at a resort near this city. Thomas was secretary and treasurer of the American Wire Nail works, of Anderson, and was about twenty eight years of age and worth $400 000 Thomas had been married about a year and his honeymoon had been spent in Europe. Both men were in liquor at the time of the murder, and the quarrel which brought it on was about a woman whom young Smith had taken to the resort in a buggy.

DIES IN A CHURCH.

Mrs. Susan Rowe, 74 Years Old, Overcome at Detroit.

DETROIT, Jan. 7.—Mrs. Susan Rowe, aged seventy-four, expired yesterday morning while at divine services in the Woodward avenue Baptist church, which she had attended for many years. She had been suffering from heart trouble for some time past, and against the advice of her physician she insisted on going to church even in stormy weather. On reaching the church she remarked to an usher that she did not feel well, and added that she could not stay away as it was communion Sunday, and she did not wish to miss the services. Just after Dr. McLaurin, the pastor, finished the opening prayer Mrs. Rowe apparently fainted, and several persons who noticed her condition went to her assistance. She was lifted out of the seat and carried to the vestibule, where every effort was made to revive her, but without avail. She rapidly grew unconscious and gradually sank unto her death, which occurred fifteen minutes later. She came to this city in 1850 from England. One of her brothers, Rev. John Wilcox, is a Congregational minister at Rockford, Ill.

VICIOUS DOGS

Attack a Young Girl and She May Die.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 7.—Maud Williams, aged ten years, was attacked by two dogs on Troy Hill, Allegheny, and was so badly injured that she may die. The little girl was walking along the street when she was set upon by a bull dog and a mongrel. A policeman was attracted by her cries and when he reached her the dogs had pulled her into the street and torn nearly all her clothes from her. Her legs and arms were terribly lacerated. The animals had to be beaten off with clubs After a long chase both of the dogs were killed.

NEARLY WIPED OUT.

The Town of Hamlin, W. Va., Suffers a Severe Loss.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Jan. 7.—Hamlin, a small town and the county seat of Lincoln county, was almost wiped out by fire Saturday night. The fire originated in the Eagle flour mills and soon spread to the Hamlin handle factory, a large plant, and also to a large sawmill. All these buildings and several smaller ones were entirely destroyed. The origin of the fire and extent of loss are not known. There was little insurance.

Rising Rivers.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Jan. 7.—Rain has fallen here steadily for the past twenty-six hours and the river is rising rapidly. At Grantsville, up the Kanawha river, the water is twenty-three feet and rising. Timbermen predict immense damage. The steamer Oneida, a Kanawha river packet, was sunk here at midnight. The ice knocked a hole in her and she will be a total loss. C. E Vandeveder, a timberman says three thousand logs are passing into the upper pool in the Kanawha each hour

National Bicycle Show.

CHICAGO, Jan 7.—The national bicycle show opened at the lake front armory today and will continue during the week. The exhibitions, besides showing high art in cycle manufacture in all its departments from the chain link to the complete machine, comprise a series of living pictures depicting the joys and sorrows of cycling, band concerts and the appearance of John S. Johnson, Tom Eck, Sanger, Zimmerman and other bicycle champions.

Japanese Minister.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—K. K. Kato, the newly appointed Japanese minister to Great Britain, has arrived from Japan on the steamer China. Kato is one of the most distinguished and able diplomats in the Japanese service. Minister Kato does not expect to see the Chinese capital taken while the cold weather lasts He will leave for the east this evening

DIED SUDDENLY.

Death Removes One of Illinois' Statesmen.

Philip Sidney Post Attacked by Heart Disease and Died at His Boarding House.

WASHINGTON, Jan 7.—Philip Sidney Post, member of congress from the tenth district of Illinois, died at the Hamilton hotel, in this city, yesterday morning a few minutes after 4 o'clock.

Mr. Post was taken ill Saturday morning about 10 o clock with a severe attack of indigestion, and his family physician, Dr Robbins, was summoned. Temporary relief was afforded, but the indigestion was followed by heart trouble with which he had occasionally been afflicted in recent years, and his condition became serious toward evening.

About ten o'clock last night the symptoms of his disease became alarming and Dr. Lincoln was called in consultation by Dr Robbins. Both physicians remained with the patient and various remedies were applied to encourage the action of the heart But that organ failed to respond to the treatment and gradually failed. Shortly after 4 o'clock the end came, the wife, daughter and younger son of the dying son being with him to the last

Prior to the assembling of the house the Illinois delegation held a meeting and prepared resolutions and a general plan of action concerning the death of Representative Post It was arranged that the Illinois delegation and a committee of members of the house should meet at the Hamilton hotel at 7 o'clock to accompany the remains to the depot A detail of policemen will serve as active pall bearers Sergeant-at-Arms Snow has designated his assistant, Mr Moeler, to accompany the funeral party to Illinois. The train leaves at 8.10, and the congressional party will be provided with a private car.

SENSATIONAL CHARGES.

Judge Augustus Ricks Accused of Wrong-doing.

S. J. Ritchie, a Wealthy Resident of Akron, Is the Accuser and the Case Comes Up in Congress.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Charges of a sensational character against United States District Judge Augustus Ricks, of Cleveland, are contained in a memorial presented to the house of representatvies today. Representative Johnson, of Ohio, secured immediate consideration for a resolution instructing the judiciary committee to investigate the charges and without debate the resolution was adopted The charges are made under oath by Mr S. J. Ritchie, of Akron, Ohio, a wealthy capitalist of that section. While directed mainly at Judge Ricks they indirectly affect Judge Burke and ex-United States Senator Payne, of Cleveland. Mr. Ritchie gives the names of a formidable array of counsel in Washington, Cleveland and Akron, who have been retained in his behalf. These include Messrs Hemphill, Shellabarger & Wilson and Butterworth, of Washington; Kerneh & Co, of Cleveland, and Judge Upson and Messrs. Green, Nray & Siebers, of Akron. The charges involve losses reaching $6,000,000 Mr. Ritchie claims to have suffered in decisions made by Judge Ricks affecting Canadian copper and nickel mines.

AN ENID EPISODE.

Two Loving Couples on a Little Spree.

They Run Across Policeman Williams and in the Melee One Man Is Killed and the Other Wounded.

SOUTH ENID, Jan. 7.—James Smith and James Brown, who lived twelve miles southwest of Enid, were in the city last evening in company with two women. Both men had six shooters belted around them and all four were under the influence of liquor. Night Watchman Dillon undertook to arrest them They drew their pistols and Dillon fled and went for Chief of Police Williams. Smith and Brown again drew their revolvers, but Chief Williams was the quickest to shoot. Brown was instantly killed and Smith is mortally wounded Intense excitement prevails and it is feared that more killing will follow.

FATHER DUCEY

Visits Satolli at Washington and is Pleasantly Received.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Father Ducey went to Washington last week to tender to Monsignor Satolli his New Year's congratulations. He stopped at the Arlington, but did not register. He was recognized by an ecclastic to whom he said he had made two calls on the Ablegate and that his reception had been of the most agreeable and friendly kind. It is believed in Catholic circles that nothing more will be heard of the differences between the archbishop and the beligerant rector. Father Ducey also called on Archbishop Corrigan and was cordially received

It is reported that Bishop McDonnell of Brooklyn, will start for Rome on Saturday of this week by the direction of the holy see. Bishop McQuade, of Rochester, is also expected to sail within a few days to explain his recent attack on Archbishop Ireland. It is not known when Archbishop Corrigan will visit Rome Cardinal Gibbons has postponed his visit indefinitely.

CARLISLE'S BILL.

It Meets the Approval of President Cleveland.

The Democratic House Caucus Will Will Urge the Passage of the Bill and Put it to a Vote Saturday.

WASHINGTON, Jan 7.—It has been found necessary to change the general plan of action on the Carlisle currency bill as a result of the death of Representative Post, of Illinois. The house democratic caucus essembles at 2 p m, instead of 3, as had been announced previously. The general debate, which was to have closed today with speeches by Representative Cox, of Tennessee, for the bill, and Sibley, of Pennsylvania, against the measure, and the closing of the debate by Mr. Springer, is necessarily thrown over until tomorrow The caucus is expected to take into consideration the unexpected interruption and to give tomorrow to general debate This will postpone the final vote until late in the week. Mr. Springer calculates that it will be taken next Saturday, but it is expected that the caucus will fix the exact time The program for the caucus is pretty well outlined in advance. Mr. Springer, as the one in charge of the bill, will submit a resolution reciting in substance that it is the judgement of the democratic caucus that the Carlisle currency bill should pass It will also direct the committee on rules to prepare a rule arranging the future debate and fixing a time when final vote is to be taken. The Springer resolution is likely to be the main issue of the caucus, as it embodies the views of those supporting the bill Mr. Springer conferred with Secretary Carlisle this morning and it is understood outlined the plan of procedure. In this connection Mr. Springer and others connected with the management of the bill discredited the report that an entirely new currency bill is to be framed with administration approval. On the contrary they say they have direct and positive assurances that the bill as now before the house has the strong support of President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle. Under these circumstances the house managers say the reports are misleading, that the administration contemplates urging an entirely new bill

RAISING RAPIDLY.

The Ohio River Threatens to Flood the Country.

Going Up at the Rate of Eighteen Inches Per Hour, if Promises to Pass the Danger Line.

PITTSBURG, Pa, Jan 7.—There is a probability of a flood at this point if the rivers continue to rise for any length of time at the present rate There is a stage of seventeen feet in the Monongahela and it is rising at the rate of eighteen inches per hour. A large amount of ice is coming out of the Youghigheny and at McKeesport the little steamer Tillie was sunk, causing a loss of about $2 500. The ice is also coming down the Allegheny and the Coffer dam at Herres Island is in danger of serious damage. The government is building a navigation lock at this point and should the Coffer dam be broken it will not only cause considerable damage but will also retard the work on the lock. A twenty-five foot stage in the Ohio river is expected here and river men fear that it will reach thirty feet Twenty-five will flood the mills along the river and cause damage to property.

Thirty feet is considered the danger line. It has been raining all night and it is still raining. At Morgantown there was eighteen inches of snow when the rain started Saturday night, and it has rained steadily ever since. Several timber rafts have gone down, and a big boom is reported at Grafton. A twenty eight to thirty foot stage is expected at Morgantown. The ice in the Clarion river broke at 7 a m, and began pouring into the Allegheny. At points between Pittsburg and the mouth of the Clarion the ice in the Allegheny is moving, though it is only broken in places. At Oil City the river is still frozen, and beyond there the ice remains firm, although a break is expected at any time

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind, Jan. 7.—Advices from southern Indiana to the News tell of disastrous floods, resulting from the heavy rains of the past forty-eight hours. The farmers are suffering severely from the overflow and more serious losses still are anticipated. At Bedford, Ind, on the Monon road the bridge across the river has been washed away, and the trains are running via North Vernon. At Vienna, on the main line of the Jeffersonville, Madison and Indianapolis railroad, one hundred feet of track has been washed away and traffic is seriously delayed from both north and south.

CINCINNATI, O, Jan. 7.—The unprecedented rain fall here of 3 47 inches makes the total fall in twenty-four hours ending at 8 a m. of 3 81 inches in the past 48 hours, has had the effect to carry the ice from the river without any damage whatever. Rivermen say they never saw a safer break up With the heavy raise reported from headquarters, and from nearly all the tributaries below, the river here is expected to go above forty feet, but no disaster of flood is expected, especially as the temperature is already falling and the rain fall seems to be ended. At noon the river was twenty-two feet, raising five inches an hour.

BELLAIRE, Ohio, Jan. 7.—The indications today are that the great flood of 1884 will be repeated. The river is rising rapidly in consequence of incessant rain for the past thirty-six hours The ice in the Ohio river and its tributaries broke up and ran out last night Several barges were lost. Two bridges on the Cleveland, Loraine and Wheeling railroad were washed away Trains could not be run today and traffic on the road is completely blocked. Steamers at their moorings here were not damaged All the snow has melted and is gone The lowlands will be flooded by tomorrow morning. People are moving to higher grounds

DRUGGED AND ROBBED.

Harry Gilbert's Saloon Raided by the Police.

Mrs. Callahan Says She Was Robbed in the Place of $45 One Night Last Week.

This noon the police swooped down upon Harry Gilbert's saloon, No. 326 Calhoun street, and arrested Robert E Pocock, the bartender, and a young man named Distel. Both men were locked up at the police station upon a charge of robbery

The police made the arrest upon information furnished by Mrs. Callahan, daughter of John Godfroy, the well-known Indian. Mrs. Callahan called at police station last Thursday and stated that the evening before she had been in Gilbert's saloon and had been drugged and robbed of $18 in cash belonging to herself, $2 belonging to Mrs Fry, of Chicago street, and a check for $25. These valuables were hidden in her stocking. Mrs. Callahan said she went into the saloon to see a friend and while there the bartender and some more men who were in the saloon asked her to drink. She drank a few glasses of beer and the liquor did not seem to effect her. At this, the woman says, the men asked her to flavor the liquor with peppermint. They poured something into the beer which at the time she thought was peppermint, but which she afterward concluded was some kind of a drug as she at once went to sleep and did not awaken until long after midnight. She then found herself at the house of Mrs Fry with whom she had been rooming. She looked for her money and found it missing

The police think they have a strong case against the two men arrested.

Last spring a man was drugged and robbed in the yard back of the same saloon

CASUALTY COLUMN.

Slippery Pavements Cause a Number of Broken Limbs.

Fred Gallmeier, of 136 Francis Street, Contributes His Right Thumb to Machinery This Morning.

This morning Fred Gallmier, of 136 Francis street, got his thumb caught in some machinery at the Western Gas and Construction company's works and the member was torn off. Dr Duemling dressed the wound.

BROKE HER ARM.

Mrs. Catherine Doyle met with quite a serious accident Saturday evening. She fell and broke one of her arms and suffered intense pain. Two years ago Mrs. Doyle fell and broke the same arm. Her home is at 237 Clay street.

WRIST BROKEN.

On Saturday evening Mrs. Harry White met with an accident at her home on Smith street The lady started to visit a neighbor and had only gone a short distance when she slipped on the ice which covered the ground and fell, breaking her arm near the wrist.

SPILT MILK

Yesterday morning a Hanna street electric car collided with John Neukamm's dairy wagon at the corner of Hanna and Wallace streets. The wagon was smashed to kindling wood and the milk was spilt about until the very gutters ran white.

CAPTAIN DICKMAN HURT

The slippery streets Saturday night were productive of accidents Capt Harry Dickman fell at 8 o'clock in front of 34 East Main street and sustained a dislocation of the hip. He was taken to the Hope hospital in the patrol wagon, where the dislocation was reduced. Daptain Dickman is an old soldier and lost an eye during the rebellion.

LOCAL LINES.

Miss Hulda Hanker's beginner's class meets this evening

M. M Thompson, ex county recorder went to Indianapolis this morning.

Miss Edith Phillips will not return to school at Terre Haute on account of the serious illness of her mother.

Christian Dalmyer, aged seventy-four, died at his home in Washington township, last night. He had been insane for a long time Interment at Huntertown.

The funeral of the late Arthur L. Hill, held this afternoon from the Trinity Episcopal church, was very largely attended, as few young men in Fort Wayne had so many warm friends as the deceased

Cut to Pieces.

DENVER, Colo, Jan 7.—A man who was run over and cut to pieces by a Kansas Pacific train, Saturday night, has been identified as John R Eldridge, a water inspector. He is said to have a brother in Chicago who is a millionaire. As he must have been lying flat on the tracks when run over, it is thought he had been rolled and murdered.

STILL THEY GET IT.

Saloon Men Who Adorn Mayor Oakley's Black List.

The Wayne Hotel Figures in by Way of Variety—Will be Tried Tomorrow

Mayor Oakley had a grist of saloon men to grind over this morning and one prominent hotel mixed in for seasoning

On the desk of Superintendent Liggett this morning was information against the following saloons

Flynn & Word
F. C. Geistdoerfer
John O'Donnell.
Charles Riedtmiller
Gus Jackson
Wayne hotel bar

The information against the Wayne hotel bar was for allowing the sale of liquor after 11 o'clock.

Against some of the saloons there was information for a half dozen or so violations and against Gus Jackson, whom the police have been watching exceedingly close, there were two charges

In nearly every one of these cases there are from three to seven witnesses, and the officers feel confident that they will make the cases "stick," to use the police court term

All day yesterday the police watched the various city hotels very closely and today Mayor Oakley will call upon some of them and talk exceedingly plain

None of the cases against the saloons will come up today before the mayor on account of press of other business, but Col. Oakley stated to a SENTINEL representative that he would begin on them tomorrow morning.

POLICE COURT

There was quite a police court this morning.

Frank Riley, Mrs Church Henry Belou and Jack Russee were all on trial for drunkeness and were sent to jail

WERE FINED

Saturday afternoon, before Mayor Oakley, John Helmcamp and H. A. Wiebke plead guilty to illegal selling of liquor and were fined $1 and costs.

Charles Conrade, the thirteen year-old boy who has been missing for a week past, has been found. Superintendent Liggett received a letter from Terre Haute saying that the boy was in custody in that city. When last seen young Conrade was near the reserve'r lake and it was feared that he had came to harm. The boy will be returned to his home, 170 East Creighton avenue.

OTHER CASES

In the court of Justice Harry France affidavits for selling liquor after 11 o'clock at night and on Sunday have been filed against Henry Wiebke, John O'Donnell, R. Beverforden and Van Dorsey.

DUTY OF A MINISTER.

In the Pulpit He Should Not Advocate Either Political Party,

But He Should Denounce Sin and Political Corruption Wherever Found and Favor Municipal Reform.

The subject for discussion before the City Ministerial association this morning was "How far should the ministers participate in politics" The discussion was opened with a paper by Rev. J. W. Brown. The concensus of opinion was that every minister should denounce sin and political corruption in whatever party found, and yet should not permit himself to advocate any definite party in the pulpit as a means to secure much needed reforms In the pulpit the minister has a peculiar mission to perform and yet in the pulpit as well as out of it, he is a man and a citizen. Condemnation can not be made too severe for the ministers and Christian men who do not ally themself upon the side of right in politics and especially in favor of municipal reform

FRUIT IN IDAHO.

Mr. Jos. F. Ervin, Formerly of This City, Writes From Boise City.

Jos F. Ervin, formerly with THE SENTINEL, who a few months ago with his family removed to the west, is now located at Boise City, in the new state of Idaho, and writes from that place that he has greatly improved in health The climate of Idaho is delightful. Some mornings, he says, are quite cold and frosty, but after 9 o'clock the weather is beautiful and resembles the month of May in Fort Wayne. Since living there he has not been troubled with catarrh, with which he was afflicted here, and he thinks the benefit to his health by removing there will be of a permanent character

"I have had a craving appetite," he writes, "and am better in every way than I was when I left Fort Wayne. I will remain here until spring, and, if the climatic advantages and benefits continue, will without doubt locate here permanently and push the fruit business The fruit business here for apples and prunes far exceeds California and equals it for pears and peaches. It was surprising to me to see the number of wealthy men who were putting out large orchards. My brother lives six miles from Boise City and has thirty acres in prune trees ten of which are over four summers old The trees are full of buds and the prospect for a big crop is good They tell me that a seven year-old prune tree bore 700 pounds of prunes last year and the fruit sold for two cents a pound in the tree The average tree, of course, does not bear so much as this, but you can, nevertheless, judge from this the amount of money there is in the business.'

Mr. Ervin writes interestingly about his trip west, giving a description of the country through which he traveled, and sends his regards to his many friends in this city.

TALKS OF A STRIKE.

Street Car Employes and the Company Disagree.

A Grievance Committee Meeting With the Officials of the Lines—Both Sides Interviewed.

For the past few days there have been rumors of another street car strike THE SENTINEL has refrained from making mention of the fact, hoping that the troubles between the men and the company might be settled in an amicable manner and the city be spared from scenes such as took place during the last street car strike.

The rumors, however, have become so prevalent that they were all morning the topic of conversation upon the streets

About noon a SENTINEL representative called at the office of the street car company for the purpose of interviewing General Manager F Robison with regard to the reported trouble. Mr Robison was not in and the chief clerk, Mr. Gerke, was not willing to make any detailed statement, preferring that Mr. Robison be seen by the reporter Elsewhere, it was learned that the street car men's greatest grievance was against Foreman Tony Lynch, who was recently placed in charge of all the men. Ed Tousley, foreman at the east barn, was relieved of his foremanship. Tousley seems to have been a general favorite with the employes and Lynch is not held in such high esteem The company, however, state that Lynch is one of their best employes and has been with them for the past twenty years almost. One of the men at the company's office said:

"I consider Lynch one of the most efficient men in our employ and nearly everyone who knows him has a good word to say for him"

It was further learned at the company's office that the union objected to the discharge of three of the men who have had permanent places on the track work. "Since our recent improvements," said Mr. Gerke, "we can find no use for these men in their former capacity, but they were placed on the extra list as were the twelve men laid off by the recent reduction in the number of the cars. Just as soon as spring opens, however, all these extras will be cared for by the company as we contemplate vastly improved service when the season permits.

PRESIDENT ORR INTERVIEWED.

President Orr, of the street car men's union, was seen at noon by a reporter. He said: "This talk about a strike being called for 10 o'clock this morning was not true. No strike could be called without the consent of the national executive board of which I am a member. I will admit there are some differences of opinion between the company and our union and summing them all up in a nut shell we do not believe the company is furnishing enough work for the number of men who are still in their service but are not allowed to earn what they should. For instance, there are fifteen or eighteen extra men who will only make a trifle for the next few months. Now there are no conductors on either the Spy Run or Lewis street lines. The motormen on these lines are compelled to do two men's work. We want some of the extras put to work on these lines. It is a fact that the men do not like Lynch, and there are some other grievances."

This afternoon as THE SENTINEL goes to press, a grievance committee of three men from the Street Car Men's union is in conference with the company. There is no knowing at this hour of writing what will be the outcome of the conference.

THE city council will meet tomorrow night when the screen ordinance will come up for consideration. This measure should become a law.

THERE is a big scramble for the offices which the Indiana legislature have to give out. The situation is reviewed in our telegraph columns today.

A TOPEKA man made one set of physicians think he was failing so in health that he needed an increase of pension and on the day after he convinced another set that he was a good risk for life insurance. And still there are people who scout at hypnotism.

ON JANUARY 1 the income tax law went into operation. A person with a yearly income of $4,000 or below is exempt from taxation, but all of an income of over $4,000 is assessed 2 per cent. A person having an income of $5 000 must pay an annual tax of $20

IN A recent address at Queen's hall, London, Mr. Asquith said: "The overcrowding in London is terrible. There are about 400,000 persons living in homes of one room, and 800,000 living two or more in a single room.' In Clerkenwell and Whitechapel 'over one-third of the population live more than two in a room' "

CONGRESSMAN LODGE, a champion of civil service, has given notice of two amendments he will offer which have for their object the extension of the civil service. One is amendatory of the bill making appropriation for the diplomatic and consular service, and puts that entire service, after three years, in the classified service. It is similar to the bill introduced by Mr. Lodge, December 18 last The second amendment applies to the urgent deficiency bill, and provides that all offices created by the income tax law shall be placed in the classified service and filled from the eligible lists of the civil service.

A GENTLEMAN who knows whereof he speaks says that if the screen ordinance ever becomes a law many young girls in this city will be saved from ruin and degradation. In several saloons in Fort Wayne girls can be found every night in the darkened rooms after 11 o'clock and until the early morning hours Pass the screen ordinance and these night revelries and debauches would come to an end.

FOR the present at least it will be safe to trust the pledges England has given our department of state in the Bluefields affair. Great as are British interests in controlling all possible approaches to the trans-isthmian routes, the firmness of the United States in asserting the Monroe doctrine left the English government no other course than a polite repudiation of all desire to control the Mosquito reservation.

WHAT action congress will take to end the growing tariff complications between this government and the European powers, or whether any measure will be adopted for that purpose are questions clouded in uncertainty. Considering the importance of the tariff war to commercial interests the attention given to it by members of congress is notably slight. Chairman Wilson, of the ways and means committee, recently introduced a bill, in accordance with the recommendation in the president's message, to repeal the one-tenth of a cent differential on sugar which evoked protests from Germany and Austria and which, it is stated, inspired retaliatory action by the former government in the form of prohibition of American beef. But it is not altogether certain that the ways and means committee will report this bill to the house nor is it at all assured that the house will pass it in case it emerges from the committee and is given a hearing Mr. Wilson was asked about the prospects of the bills but did not speak enthusastically of them. He said, in answer to a question, that its claims for consideration might be brought to the attention of the rules committee after the currency bill had been disposed of but added that the remaining time of this congress was very short and there would be a great pressure upon the committee for allowments of time for various other important bills.

Why We Sleep.

Probably nobody with any heart and imagination or spirit of scientific inquiry in his brain has failed to sit up nights, so to speak, to find out how he goes to sleep. It is a discovery that none has yet made. One moment we are broad awake. Next thing we know we have been sound asleep for a longer or shorter time. The process of awakening seems more gradual, and then we often catch glimpses of what the mind has been about during the sleep life. These glimpses indicate that our sleep life is far more wonderful than our waking life. Dr. Henry Wurz contributes to The Popular Science Monthly a paper on the chemistry of sleep. He compares natural slumber with the process of going to sleep under anæsthetics. Among the substances that produce insensibility none is better known than what is commonly called carbonic acid gas, known to chemists as carbon dioxide gas. Its properties are so well understood that Parisians of the poorer class occasionally commit suicide by shutting themselves up with a vessel of burning charcoal. Its fumes lull them to sleep, and they never wake again. Now, in our bodies, by mental and muscular exertion, this same gas is produced in large quantities during the day. The system is therefore more or less overloaded with it. This produces the tired, sleepy feeling, Dr. Wurz thinks, and finally makes us drop off into the land of dreams. During our state of quiescence and repose we do not produce the carbon gas in such quantities. The large amount already in our systems is eliminated through the lungs and through the insensible perspiration of the skin

The absence of the gas in the morning makes us feel bright, wide awake and refreshed. Then we can conquer the world. We bound out of bed and begin the next day's work, expending our forces, generating in our bodies the carbon dioxide and loading up with it, all ready for sweet Mother Nature to rid us of it once more at night.

The Sun Do Move.

John Jasper, the negro preacher, always stuck to it that the sun did move, and Jasper was right. In fact, so far as has been discovered, it has not only one motion, but three

First it revolves on its axis Astronomers know this by the regular recurrence and disappearance of the sun spots It takes the sun nearly a month of our days to turn around once—more than a lunar month, in fact, for the mean time of its axial rotation is 28½ days. Its next motion is not so well understood But it has been found that our great sun itself revolves slowly around the center of gravity of the whole solar system, wherever and whatever that is, just as the magnetic pole of the earth is believed to have a motion around in a small circle. Very delicate mathematical instruments have been employed to discover this motion of the sun around the center of gravity.

Besides these two there is another motion which would be calculated to affright the timid if its goal and aim were not so very far off. Wise men have discovered that the sun, with all its planets trailing after it, is rushing at breakneck speed into the constellation Hercules, in due time to be swallowed up by that constellation. The speed at which we are all flying toward Hercules is considered by the best authorities on the subject to be at least 150,000,000 miles a year But this universe shall not get there in our lifetime nor our children's

A New Labor System.

The United States labor commissioner, Hon Carroll D. Wright, is certain that a new system of work and wages must be devised which shall do entire justice to both capital and labor and at the same time recognize the moral forces at work contemporaneously with the industrial forces

In a paper in The Forum, Mr. Wright asks two questions: First, shall a man conduct his business as he pleases? Second, during periods of depression, must the savings or reserve fund of labor be drawn upon, while the savings of capital, or its reserve fund and dividends, remain intact? To the first of these questions the labor commissioner finds a ready answer A man may not conduct his business as he pleases when by so doing he interferes with the convenience, business, health or comfort of his neighbors or the public. Society has already displayed its right to interfere with private business that damages the health or interests of the public. Illustrations of this are given in the case of factories whose products and refuse are deleterious to health or property owners whose land is necessary to the public good If a man seeks to make a fence, or turn a water course in such a way as to damage his neighbor, the law steps in and says he shall not do it. In the same way society has the right to step in and compel a man to arbitrate or turn over his business to somebody else who will arbitrate when large numbers of people are damaged by his refusal to do either "The impairment of capital is the loss of labor; the impairment of labor is the loss of capital."

The second question, whether capital should not draw on its reserve funds in hard times, just as well as labor, Mr. Wright leaves to his readers to answer. He merely asks whether, when workmen are idle, they must use up all their savings to live on, while the dividends of capital are the same and its reserve fund remains full, or whether there should not be some mutual sharing of burdens. The answer to this question will go far toward settling the labor question, the writer thinks.

Mr Wright remarks incidentally that those corporations that voluntarily raise in good times the wages cut down in bad times rarely have strikes. It is the certainty that their pay will not be raised again without a strike and a fight that makes workingmen so savage when their wages are reduced.

The German Parliament.

In the German empire the legislative branch of government is not constructed on the lines that rule in most countries. There are two houses, but they do not correspond to our representative chamber and senate

When the consolidation of the German states into an empire took place under Bismarck's sway, there was formed the bundesrath. The confederation of the different states formed a council to sit at Berlin. The federation itself was called a "bund," or bond; its council was the "rath." Delegates are appointed by the rulers of the separate states as members of the bundesrath. These form a council to deliberate on measures for the good of the whole empire. When they decide on a bill, they frame it and recommend it to the imperial legislature, which is called the reichstag. If the reichstag sees fit, it passes the act the bundesrath has prepared, and the bill becomes a law when the emperor's signature is affixed

It is not necessary, however, for an act to originate in the bundesrath. It may originate in the reichstag and be passed But the bundesrath has the same veto power enjoyed by the British house of lords Members of the emperor's cabinet also frame bills for the reichstag to pass.

The members of the reichstag are elected by the people Emperor William is one of the most arbitrary rulers that ever sat on the German throne, and he is fully persuaded that he represents the Almighty to the German people, yet he makes a great show of patronizing the reichstag, as when he opened its sessions in person in a characteristic speech at the dedication of the new and splendid parliament house. But for all that, if this reichstag elected by the people to make laws for them does not pass his pet bills for raising money or for suppressing socialists, he will dissolve it in a hurry and order a new election.

Betrayed Himself.

A criminal is also a fool. This was never more fully demonstrated than in the case of Seely, the defaulting bookkeeper of the Shoe and Leather bank in New York. He got away in safety to Chicago. He dyed his mustache and was living quietly at a lodging house. If he had kept his mouth shut and continued living quietly and had shaved off his mustache instead of dying it, the chance is that he could have got safe out of the country in a little while. But, no! The place where the detective finally found him may give a hint of what he has done with all the money he has been helping to steal during ten years Horse races were in progress at Chicago. Seely went to these and "played the races "

At the races he picked up acquaintance with an agreeable stranger. First he told the agreeable stranger that his name was Evans. Then as they drank and betted together, he said his real name was Dale. That set the agreeable stranger, in reality Detective McFarland, to thinking He suspected this was Seely. There were more betting and a good deal more drinking together. Then at last the defaulter confidentially and voluntarily told McFarland that he was Seely He told on himself Immediately McFarland got drunker yet and went to the police office and had Seely arrested. When the arrest was really made, the detective went on a bigger drunk than ever. At this it is a question whether the $5,000 reward he gets will do him much good

It would be the making of the Rio Grande valley if the proposed huge dam and reservoirs should be built across the Rio Grande river at El Paso, storing the waters in the rainy season so they could be used at need in the dry season. This much is plain. But is it quite so plain that the United States government should build that dam? Why would it not be better for some of our great capitalists who are now rather glad to get 2 and 3 per cent for their money to invest it in this great work? It would be a dead sure investment.

Lehman's U.S.

34 and 36 Calhoun Street. Foellinger Block.

SOON after Mr. Vincent had taken the lead in the criminal investigation department of the English police chief quarters he called me into his office.

"Jarnold," said he, do you happen to know this place at all," handing me a slip of newspaper.

It was an auctioneer's advertisement. "An old-fashioned family residence, commanding extensive views," etc.

"Oh, yes, sir. I have lived in Nottingham," I answered. "That's one of the haunted houses in that neighborhood. My landlady could have talked a year about it. It encloses remains of a very old building."

"Very good. In fact, Van Tornow and Prettypage both said you knew those parts. Well, the family, intimate friends of ours, cannot sell the property, and as the little peculiarities of the ghosts you have been told about verge on larceny, I think you may as well combine your August outing with a stroke of business that way."

"Very well, sir."

That was enough for me. I ran down by the night train and went over in the morning to the cottage in Sherwood forest, where I had formerly lodged. At the first mention of Gunthorpe Manor, Mrs. Wingood chattered as volubly as ever. The ghost had not been laid by the demolition of the bulk of the antique structure, but perambulated the new house and grounds. Vexed at its old haunts being annulled it revenged itself by tormenting the guests, and had taken away articles of jewelry from several sleeping rooms, not even sparing the Countess Massarene, who had been given the grand old bedchamber where James I. had been welcomed.

I went back to the town and saw the family solicitor. The articles lost by visitors up to the latest and most important disappearance of Lady Massarene's casket had not been seen by pawnbrokers'. The police told me that they had not come upon them. I could answer for London's and Van Tornow had investigated Holland and Hamburg.

I remarked to the lawyer "that the thefts have been perpetrated by some one who does not need money or who is unable to dispose of his plunder from being green to the job."

With a letter from Mr. Waschager to Mr. Gunthorpe to blind the servants to my true position, I drove over to the house.

It was very large since the thick walls of the castle had been preserved, though the tower and ramparts had been destroyed. I doubt not that the Sherwood forest robbers had held it even against forces from the town and Nottingham castle. The latter commanded it with modern artillery, but in its days of glory

it would have mocked at its brass dragons. There was a moat with running water, in which one could fish out of the bedroom window, while the rabbits, always plentiful hereabouts, scamped showered over the capacious park, which merged into the forest itself.

Mr. Gunthorpe was a hearty old gentleman, a little bluff at first, with bowed shoulders, but alert under his gray hair. His mother seemed quite as likely to outlive him as his recently wedded wife, a town lady who had evidently been made nervous by the mysterious purloinings. Mr. Gunthorpe was good enough to introduce me as a friend of Waschager, and a gentleman connected with the law. I was rather timid at first, till I felt my head, but bless you, the strange robberies had frightened away these rich friends, and the twenty people in the large reception room were such as had nothing to lose and went to bed with their watches under their pillows. I kept quiet, but I was as much at home as those who had been staying a whole week.

They were rather jolly, and indeed were having a rare laugh at Mrs. Gunthorpe, [senior, for having mistaken the wooden effigy of Robin Hood in the principal bedroom for a living man and spoken of it. There were others than I who had never seen it, and so I had no need to suggest that we should have a peep at it.

It was really a clever thing to have been carved in times gone back. It was cut out of the oak against which Robin Hood had made his last stand to the legal authorities. He was clad in green, the texture of the cloth well represented by graining the wood, quite lifelike, and on a low pedestal, like the figures of a waxwork show. It was all painted up in natural colors. He had a bow and a string of wire in his hands, and leaned a trifle forward on it with a sort of mocking smile, and as he laughed at the idea of his ever being captured. I have seen the same expression on many a superior rogue.

I do not know that I examined the statue more particularly than the others, because I was studying their faces and those of the butler and another servant who had come along to open the door. I fancied that Mr. Butler gave a slight start when his master bade him prepare this room, not for the persons of quality who were of the party, but for plain Mr. Grograin, as I was announced to be. Mr. Butler was very assiduous toward me at dinner, if not personally, by ordering the footmen not to neglect me, and, if I had not been on my dignity, I saw that he would have liked me to have shared a bottle with him in his own room.

However, I lay down that night in the huge room to reflect over the legend, and whether, as I had the impression from the start, it was not related to the thefts of the present time. The big bed was very comfortable, and cajoled one off to sleep as if he had been given a soothing syrup. Still I had time to reflect on the legend told me.

In the days of the foresters of Sherwood, the owner of Leebing castle, who lived on bad terms with the greenwood rovers, from his cherishing his deer as private property, was informed by a warden that a man in the hateful green of the venison stealers had been prowling around all the morning and was suspected by the sentinel of having climbed in at a window. My lord had his own opinion of the object of his visitor's call, and when he saw his young and beautiful daughter confused at his question, he had simply felled her to the ground—brute that he was—and rushed, foaming at the mouth and with sword and dagger drawn, all over the castle, crying out: "Flame and faggot for the deer stealers!" But the follower of the free woodmen was not to be found, and what made the sting of defeat far keener, when the lord returned to torture his daughter into a revelation she had vanished like a spectre. Then, only then, he remembered that the monks had talked of a secret cell, where their prior had hidden from an ancestor of his. He ordered close guard without and within and rode over to the priory. But the monks pretended to ignorance, and he went home more furious than ever. For days he lived like a hermit in the room where he had last seen his child, sleeping with drawn sword between two wolf dogs, but his watch resulted in nothing. Isabel and the young forester were never seen more.

Dreaming is something I am not given to unless I have not had my regular "go" at tobacco. I certainly had smoked a couple of cigars—very fine—but I longed for a pipe. That made me restless, and I had the dullest serving up of my thoughts — faces that I had not seen for twenty years, and those of the last day—a jumble so that I hardly knew where I was spending the night. I daresay I was tired, too. Anyhow, I remember just as I had reasoned out that, as the house walls were identical with those of the old castle, there might still exist the secret hole, I heard a twang like a bow string let go after a lusty pull. I am not sure I woke, but fancy I recalled a kind of human figure in light colors cross the room and return with a companion. There was a jingle, as of coin, and I went off to sleep again, sound as a stone. So I thought. But I woke up with a start, cold as if I had been plunged in ice water, and then I was out of the clothes, standing beside Robin Hood. I rubbed my eyes, for the scoundrel seemed to be nodding to me for a moment and grinning, and I could swear the bowstring was vibrating, but, of course, the moment I put my finger and thumb to it that stopped the thrill. I walked all around it in the dark. Then I lit the candle, and made a thorough search of the room. But the wainscoting had been painted and varnished in these five years, and there was not a crack that I could decide to be a panel. I lost my temper at being so baffled when I was confident of being on the right track, and stamped my foot. The good old oaken plank yielded not a jot to my rage, but I heard something like the clash of metal in the direction of the statue. I ran over to it and gave it a shake. I might as well have worked with the giant oak it was hewn from. Nothing gave way, though I believed there was an echo of the metallic sound, within or below. I knocked on the wood in all parts with the massive extinguisher of the candlestick, but it did not seem hollow.

I sat down on the table, swinging my legs as I reflected, wrapped up in the coverlet till morning, only removing my gaze from the statue to scrutinize the room. Mr. Gunthorpe found me there when he came, in anticipation of the servant's call to breakfast. His was not a house for gongs or bells. He was too agitated to notice my curious position.

"Mr. Brooker, the short gentleman with red whiskers," cried he, "has been robbed of his pocket book in the night. What on earth am I to do with this depredation going on, sir?"

He fairly wrung his hands in despair, as if he had lost all hope now that the London detective had not been his palladium.

"Will you please leave me here? Send me breakfast, meanwhile, and go learn if anyone else has been disturbed,"

He returned simultaneously with the servant and his tray of tea and toast, anchovy and eggs, with an even more deplorable look.

Pantler, the butler, was missing, and his wife was sure the ghost of Robin Hood had spirited her poor, dear John away.

I remembered the nocturnal visions, the one that had become two, the twang of the bowstring, and I said when the footman withdrew:

"I would not like you to laugh at me, sir, but the key to the mystery is held, I am confident, by this grinning monster in Lincoln green."

"Eh?" astounded as if I had purposed cutting his grandfather's portrait into whip snappers.

"There is a hole in the wall or floor somewhere, here or there, and the handle to the trap or panel is in this figure. And the machinery is in actual use, for I should have heard the creak if it was let get rusty. I've felt the thing all over, and found nothing, though, like a boss. It's a boss' puzzler, sir, that's what it is!"

"Dear me! Bless us!" said he, rubbing his chin in the hollow of his hand. "The eyes don't move, do they?" as if it made any difference whether they did or not.

"More like the hands," I blurted out, conjecturally. "Do you see? I mean the bow! I'll have a good pull at the bow, anyway!"

You are welcome not to believe it, but when I put one hand to the bow and the other to the wire chord and pulled at the first while a-pushing at the other they bowed apart wide, and as the bow ends came down the figure bent in the middle and ducked its head and shoulders, as if to make a back for leapfrog.

"And, sir," I said, "if you will turn your eyes yonder you'll see that the bow has done the trick."

A yard square panel of the wainscotting had slid right down below the floor level, clean as a whistle. We ran up and looked down. It was an easy jump, and a candle box was put there for a step. The cell was not as large as you could give a promenade concert in, but it would hold a Daniel Lambert without squeezing him tight. There was a very tidy collection of empty sardine boxes and American provision tins, showing that good living does not depend on the length of your dining table. But the birds had flown. There were two or three jewel cases, empty also, under my feet when I stepped down. There was a puff of cold air.

"There is another opening," said I. "You may come down and look around for the skeleton of your great-great-grandfather, if you like, sir"—nettled by his still looking, struck all of a heap, and this was nothing so wonderful, after all. "I am going to push straight on and see where the business comes out."

I nearly broke my neck by falling down some steps in the walls, but after that it was smooth sailing into the open air. It was not in the woods that we were to overtake the butler and a young woman who had begun by helping him to reduce the larder stock, and then took care of the property which he stole from the guests. They had managed it neatly. When she was afraid to tackle the guest in the Robin Hood rooms she would open the door to let him in; or if he had robbed the tenants of another chamber, she likewise opened the way for his passing the goods to her in her receptacle. For caution's sake she dwelt there as long as possible without change. Luckily for the owners, the precious pair had intended to elope with their spoil when complete, and nearly all the valuables were recovered, and quite a show they made in the justices' private room at the town hall. Mr. Pantler was "nailed" at Derby, she nearer London. The trial was brushed through without more evidence than sufficed to convict, as Lady Massarene did not want any parade made over her name. The hole in the wall was filled up. Master Robin was put out in the gardens when Mr. Gunthorpe died recently, and his still young madam had a gas tube stuck in the bold poacher's hand instead of the bow, which I had pulled to good purpose.

Animals Predict Danger.

If men were not too proud to learn from animals they might be warned of many dangers. It was noticed for several days before the terrible earthquake in the Riviera a few years ago that the horses in that district acted very strangely. They would stop suddenly, and for no apparent reason would tremble violently from head to foot. When the disaster came, those who had noticed the terror of the animals concluded that they must have heard subterranean noises or felt a trembling of the earth so slight that men had not perceived it. It has also been stated that the birds took flight from Hamburg a few days previous to the cholera epidemic in that city two years ago, and it is supposed that they found the air pestilential.

Testing the Quality of an Umbrella.

"The best way to test the value of an umbrella," observed a young man, "is to use it for a walking stick on a plank sidewalk. If the umbrella is not worth carrying home it will not catch between the planks. If it is fairly good it will catch occasionally and break where it can be mended. If it is extra good, it will snap in three places and the jagged ends will stick through the cover."

Wise Little Mary.

Little Mary was overheard talking to herself:

"For your soul so pure and sweet
Makes my happiness complete,
And I wonder at your feet,
Sweet Marie.'

"I wonder what was the matter with her feet, anyway."

ALL HABIT.

The Son of Toil Had One Which He Couldn't Shake.

"Habit, habit, habit! How it binds a man with chains of iron!" exclaimed the temperance lecturer out of a job dramatically

"And that's right, too," commented the son of toil.

"Ah, my friend, you seem to have had some experience with habits!" said the lecturer.

"You bet I have," replied the other. "That's what causes all the misery of my life"

The lecturer glowed with pleasure. Here right before him was a horrible example, and he proceeded to draw the map out.

"You have felt the irresistible craving which drags you down, while all your better nature is crying out against it"

"That's what."

"You have realized that your habit was hurrying you to the grave at breakneck speed, and yet you have felt that you could not resist it!"

"Yes, sir."

"It has robbed you of sleep and robbed you of food, made you bleary-eyed, nervous and physically exhausted?"

"Many and many a night, sir, I've gone without sleep just from thinking of it, and it has got to be a common practice to go for long spells without eating when the pressure comes "

"You have starved your family and let your children go in rags because of it?"

"Well, hardly that. My besetting habit has taken care of my family in pretty good shape "

"You don't mean that you are a dealer?"

The son of toil looked puzzled, but he answered, "No."

"Ah, I see, you have not yet reached the lowest stage of degradation, and you think to escape it. But let me warn you, my friend, you will not unless you overcome your habit. Resolve to conquer it. You can if you try."

"Well, I don't know. I sometimes think it would be pretty dull living if I should break it off."

"No, no, no! You would be a free man. You would feel such joy as you never before had felt in your life. Your wife would fall on your neck with tears of thankfulness. Come, my friend, the demon has not yet an unbreakable clutch upon you Sign the pledge never to drink"—

"Drink! Why, I never drank a drop in my life. What are you giving us?"

"But I thought you said you knew the power of habit, that you had felt the craving which you could not resist; that you had spent nights without sleep and days without food; that you were being dragged down to an early grave"—

"I have, but 'tain't the drink habit. What's done all that to me, preacher, is the consarned habit I've had ever since I was a boy of working."—Buffalo Express.

In Early Youth.

"I was not aware that you knew him," said Tom Snack to an Irish friend the other day.

"Know him!" he exclaimed "I knew him when his father was a boy!"—Burlington (Ia.) Gazette.

And Then He Was Shown the Door.

"I have here," said the sculptor, "a plaster cast of a young woman of Boston."

"I see," said his visitor genially. "The pale cast of thought, so to speak."—Chicago Record.

The World's Sweetest Songs

have charmed young and old; rich and poor; everywhere the world over. The Richest and Brightest Gems of Song have been gathered from all nations and are offered exclusively by the Sentinel to its readers for almost nothing.

NEVER! Were you offered richer songs.
NEVER! Were you offered music so cheap.
NEVER! Was Music more highly praised.

The celebrated director of the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, Mass., after examining these Songs says: "It gives me great pleasure to say that they appear to be what the title indicates a collection of REAL GEMS; I am sure they will find a hearty welcome in every home in the land."

The Rev. Dr. Lyman Hurlburt, after an examination of these Songs, writes: "I consider it the best collection of Songs for the family that I have ever seen.'

DID YOU EVER DREAM?

of getting the sweetest songs of all nations words and music, elegant type, fine paper, handsomely bound, and indexed, for HALF A CENT EACH? Have you not been accustomed to paying thirty to fifty cents each for such songs? Come or send at once to the Sentinel Office and get them.

RAILWAYS AND SHOPS.

David Roche Has an Arm Badly Pinched.

Bert Mills Loses Two Fingers in a Pair of Shears—The Electric Light's Long Distance Telephone.

David Roche, a freight brakeman on the Pittsburg road, had his right arm painfully pinched between the drawbars of train 79, on the Pittsburg, last Saturday night Mr. Roche was brought to this city and taken to St. Joseph hospital, where Dr. C B. Stemen dressed his injured arm The bones were not broken and the arm will be saved David is the son of Blacksmith James Roche, of the Pittsburg shops

LOST TWO FINGERS

Bert Mills, an employe of the electric light works, had the misfortune to lose two fingers of his right hand this morning while operating a pair of shears. The fingers were taken off above the first joint.

LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE

At the office of the electric light works on Saturday was placed a long distance telephone, which now puts that establishment in direct communication with all the large cities of the union. After it was installed, Mr. McDonald was called up at his office in New York City and interviewed at some length upon important business matters. A duplicate set has also been placed in the private office of Mr. C. S Knight, who can now talk with Chicago, St. Louis, New York, Boston and all the other cities in which the agents of the Fort Wayne Electric corporation reside

MINOR MENTION.

C. O. Cook, machinist in the Pittsburg shops, is sick and off duty.

C. H. Habscher, a painter, has secured employment in the Pittsburg paint shops.

Edward Leach, the veteran tank builder at the Pittsburg shops, is sick and off duty.

H. G. Ricke, late of Diether & Sarrows, has taken a position in the Pittsburg car shops.

Pittsburg coaches 39 and 168 went into the Fort Wayne shops this morning to be repaired.

John Wolf, who had a foot injured a few days ago, resumed work at the Bass shops this morning.

John McCarthy and George Anweiler, of the Pittsburg shops, have resumed work after an illness.

J. H. Furlong, G. A. Garlow and W. C. Reffelt, Nickel Plate brakemen, have resumed their duties on the road.

Blacksmith Henry Tonsing, who was sick a few days last week, resumed his duties in the Pittsburg shops this morning.

F. Gephardt, of the Pittsburg lumber yards, is kept from his duties by the illness of some of the members of his family.

John O'Harrs has taken a position in the Wabash shops.

A C. Beaver, of the Fort Wayne Lumber company, is quite sick

John Murphy, of the Wabash boiler shop, is off duty on account of sickness

This morning the electric light works shipped the machinery for a 1,300 light plant to Jersey City.

After a week's illness, Samuel Hillicker, Pittsburg engineer, has resumed charge of his engine

H. K. Rehling, Wabash boilermaker, is suffering with an ulcerated tooth, and is unable to work.

Henry Sommers, machinist in the Pittsburg shops, is suffering with a bad cold and lame back and is off duty.

G. J. DeVilbiss resumed work in the Wabash machine shops this morning, having recovered from his recent illness.

J. H. Klein has been appointed trainmaster of the Chicago and Erie road at Huntington, vice O F. Gross, deceased

Joseph Weinat, of the Chicago and Erie shops at Huntington, has returned home after a pleasant visit in this city.

Foreman Joseph Slater, of the Bass blacksmith shop, left this morning for a short tour of Ohio cities in the interest of the firm

During the year 1894 only 695 locomotives were built in this country. In 1893 the number was 2,011, and in 1892 it was 2,012.

Foreman George Shisler, of the Anthony Wayne paint shop, resumed work this morning. He has been quite sick with tonsilitis

C. A. Desassure has been appointed general passenger agent of the Memphis and Charleston road, vice B. W. Wren, resigned.

Henry Reike, the locomotive tender builder in the Pittsburg shop, is still suffering with sore eyes. He has not worked for six weeks.

Roadmaster Adams, of the Wabash, who was thought to be fatally ill two months ago, is well and looking after business with old-time energy.

C. D. Scheumann and C. A. Kresse, carpenters employed by the Wabash, are taking a vacation for the purpose of attending to private business.

J S. Lee, Nickel Plate fireman, is suffering from the effects of an accident, which happened last Thursday, when one of his hands was badly burned.

A. W. Noyes has been appointed traveling passenger agent of the Chicago Great Western for Indiana and Illinois and J. A. Granger for Ohio.

Machinist William Altevogt, of the Bass works, who is suffering with fever, is much improved, but it will be several days before he will be able to work.

Henry Nyland, of the Bass machine shop, and his family are sorely afflicted with typhoid fever. Mr. Nyland has been unable to work since Christmas.

Sylvester Richards, watchman at the electric light works, is entertaining his brother, who lives at South Omaha and whom he had not seen for eleven years.

District Passenger Agent R G. Thompson has received a new ticket stamp which reads "Wabash Union Station," the new name for the Wabash depot.

George Waldschmith, of the Pittsburg planing mills, who has been sick for over a week, suffered relapse Saturday, and will not be able to work for some days.

In 1865 the rate on a carload of live stock, Indianapolis to New York, was $150; in 1870, it dropped to $100; in 1885, to $85, and there stood when the inter state commerce act went into effect The roads then based rates on the tonnage carried, which makes the present rate on an ordinary carload of live stock $52

As an indication of the dull times the Peru Journal states that over 200 men applied for work at an ice house in that city where only ten men were needed.

J. G Ruple, late district passenger agent of the Pennsylvania company, will, on January 15, become one of the district passenger agents of the Baltimore and Ohio.

Next Thursday is pay day at the Bass works, Indiana Machine works, Fort Wayne Iron works, Peter Box and Lumber company and Horton Manufacturing company.

Chief Dispatcher W H Tigar, of the Pittsburg, has gone to Earl Park, Ind, on business connected with his office as grand regent of the Royal Arcanum He will return home tomorrow.

Harry Crawford, jr, states that the Chicago and Southwestern is arranging to purchase six engines. The company has suffered seriously in its business the last few months for lack of power.

Eugene McLaughlin, of the electric light works, who was unable to work for several days because of the serious condition of his wife, reported for duty this morning, the lady being much better.

Burleigh Currier has been transferred from the engineering to the laboratory department of the electric light works. Charles Becker has taken the position in the engineering department which was vacated by Currier.

John Slater hobbles about with great difficulty, having a very sore foot. Friday night a wagon wheel passed over the member, crushing the little toe. Mr. Slater works as usual, notwithstanding his injuries

Car building is increasing and the prospects of lively trade in that line are brightening. Last Saturday the Indiana Car and Foundry company closed a contract to build 500 stock cars for the Northwestern.

The published statement that John Sloan, the ex-passenger conductor on the Pittsburg road, had taken a position on the Findlay road, is an error Mr. Sloan is at Crestline, Ohio, at present and is not engaged in railroading

There is a heavy movement of west bound freight at present Yesterday the Pittsburg sent three "lights" east and today four more started in the same direction. The freight consists of iron, coal, coke and merchandise.

The work of converting the Bedford and Switz City from a narrow to a standard gauge road has been commenced The road is owned by the Monon, which is laying the rails taken up on the Indianapolis division in widening the gauge.

William Haley, formerly a brakeman has sued the Panhandle company for $10,000, the alleged amount of damage sustained by the sudden starting of a train, whereby Haley was thrown down and severely injured. The case will be tried in the Logansport courts

E St John, recently elected vice-president and general manager of the Seaboard Air-line, took charge on the 1st of January, and by circular issued to the agents and employes, all of whom are to be retained, urges them to put forth their best efforts in the company's behalf

Applicants for work make life almost burdensome to master mechanics and foremen of shops, who are not only bothered at the works, but cannot pass down street without being stopped and importuned for work. Where all the idle mechanics come from is a mystery, as the shops in Fort Wayne are employing nearly as many men as they ever did.

Oil as a locomotive fuel will never come into general use in this country, for the simple reason that there is not enough of it for that purpose. It is stated that the Pennsylvania railroad alone would consume over one-third of the total production of petroleum in the United States were its locomotives to use oil for fuel

Railway constructions in Indiana for the year 1894 was the smallest in the history of the state during the railway era, there being only sixty-one miles constructed. Of this amount the Findley, Fort Wayne and Western built eighteen miles, the Chicago, Indiana and Eastern twenty-five miles and the Chicago and Southeastern, eighteen miles.

Our wholesale merchants are developing some trade at the stations along the line of the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western road. Agent C. H. Newton said this morning that the freight business was growing wonderfully, and would in time be quite heavy. George Durfee and Christian Heit, traveling men, started over the line this morning in the interest of their respective firms.

The revenue of the Western Union Telegraph company for furnishing the time of day to this country amounted last year to about $1,500,000. The company has a telegraph desk in the naval observatory in Washington. Four minutes before noon the wires of the system all over the United States are cleared of business, and the instant the sun passes the seventy-fifth meridian, electricity carries the news to every city.

An exchange says that the Pennsylvania company has a great surprise in store for the competing lines which have joined issues against the former company. The surprise hinted at is believed to be the abandonment of the mileage book plan altogether and the making of a two-cent a-mile rate to all points on the various branches of the Pennsylvania system. By this plan it is believed travel would increase sufficiently to off-set the loss in reducing the rate.

The genial Harry Evans, boss carpenter at the electric light works, and his estimable wife entertained Saturday evening in honor of Mr. Evans' birth day. There were fourteen persons, all gentlemen, present and the evening was devoted to card playing and listening to music produced by the host. At 11 o'clock a most delicious and substantial supper was served in courses The guests presented Mr Evans with a silver writing outfit, including ink stand, paper weight and knife.

William C. Scheifer and Miss Maggie Rodaheaver were married Christmas at Indianapolis and so quiet were they about it that only a few of their intimate friends have learned of the wedding. Mr Scheifer is a machinist, employed in the Wabash shops, where he reported for duty this morning for the first time since he became a benedict The bride is also a resident of this city and is quite popular among her acquaintances She has relatives living in Muncie and the couple spent a portion of their honeymoon in that city.

The news comes from Cedar Rapids and Vinton, Iowa, the headquarters of the Order of Railway Conductors and the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, that all the railways have refused to issue the customary passes to the heads of all labor organizations. If this should prove correct the labor orders will suffer greatly The grand officers of railway organizations travel constantly, going from one city to another settling grievances, visiting lodges and performing other services If they are compelled to pay fare the money thus expended will run up into the thousands of dollars during the year.

Fears of Foul Play.

BUTTE, Mont., Jan. 7—Peter Breen, district master workman of the Knights of Labor, who went to New Orleans in November to attend the Knights of Labor convention, has not been heard from since his arrival in New Orleans and his friends in Butte feel certain that he has met with foul play.

In Olden Times

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action, but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

Late Literary News.

An old-fashioned sea story full of interest and adventure, with a strong love motive, is begun by W. Clark Russell in the January Cosmopolitan. 'Guida" succeeds Froude, Gosse, Lang and other distinguished writers with an installment of the "Great Passions of His tory" series, which has been appearing in The Cosmopolitan. A discussion is aroused by Mr. Edward Bok's article on "The Young Man and the Church" which will consume tons of ink before it is settled. Just preceding the famous Charcot's death he prepared an article for The Cosmopolitan on Pasteur, to be published after Pasteur's death. But Charcot has died first, and so, with the consent of Charcot's executors, the article is given now The present "Theatrical Season in New York" is critically considered by Mr James S Metcalfe, editor of Life, and there are stories by Tourgee, Howells and the famous French writer, Francois Coppee.

Literary Note From the Century Co.

The wide spread interest that is felt in the career of Napoleon at this time is very clearly shown by the fact that of the November and December numbers of The Century, containing the opening chapters of Prof Sloane's new Life, more copies were sold than of corresponding issues for several years past. The January number is already out of print, and a large increase is necessary in the regular February edition.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passage, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucus, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across the forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

Saturday afternoon, in the parlors of the First Presbyterian church, was held the second meeting of this season of the Woman's Club league, and it was one of the most enjoyable meetings ever held by this association. After the report from the board of directors and library committee and a musical program from the Morning Musical, an address entitled "Unrest" was delivered by Mrs Virginia C Meredity, of Cambridge City. It may be interesting to know that Mrs. Meredith, who is a business woman of much ability, owns a valuable stock farm near Cambridge City, which is under her personal management Mrs Meredith is president of the Indiana Union of Literary clubs, a valued member of the Farmer's institute and was chairman of the woman's committee on awards at the world's fair. Her address was full of practical thoughts and very helpful. The "unrest", to which she referred is that which characterizes the woman of the nineteenth century and that which makes a woman eager to become thoroughly informed on every subject and thus be able to exercise the best influence in church and society. After the address prettily decorated tea tables were brought into requisition and tea was served by members of different clubs belonging to the league.

THE FIGHT IS ON.

Hoosier Republicans and the Legislature.

Many Candidates After the Offices.

Justus C. Adams Leads in the Speakership Race.

The Contest for This and Other Positions Is an Animated One—Electioneering Ready for the Session.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 7.—Fourteen years of almost uninterrupted control of the legislative patronage by the democrats have made the republicans exceedingly hungry, and now that the opportunity is presented to feed again at the public crib, every office within the gift of the general assembly is being sought after by from six to a dozen candidates, there being hardly a county in the state that is not represented in the rank for party preferment at the hands of the coming majority caucus. Each of the officers to be nominated will have several appointments to make, and the army that is hovering around for the subordinate positions and attempting to secure promises from candidates that appear to have the inside track is so large that no one has yet had the hardihood to attempt a census of their numbers.

There are probably thirty subordinate positions to be filled in the two bodies, and it is no exaggeration to say that 300 republicans are waiting and watching for these positions. Many of the candidates, taking advantage of this situation, have made promises right and left in the event of their nomination by the caucus and these promises have brought to their assistance a strong influence which is working vigorously for their election. Some of the aspirants, knowing that more promises have been made than there are positions to be filled, have pledged their support to two or more candidates for the same office and the situation has become so clouded by the doubtful attitude of both workers and candidates that it is hard to form a reasonable conjecture as to the outcome in many contests.

There is every reason to believe, however, that Justus C. Adams, of this city, will be nominated for speaker of the house, though for this position, as well as others, there are several candidates. The friends of Adams are willing to sacrifice everything else for the speakership and have pledged themselves not to ask for anything else for this county if the officer of speaker is conferred on Adams. The reason for this lies in the fact that Adams stands cheek by jowl with the local politicians and with what is known as the Harrison machine and is pledged to every measure that they have proposed. He is in favor of taking the appointing power away from the governor and wants such a reorganization of the benevolent and penal boards of the state as will give control of those institutions to the republican party. He has promised his support to all party measures that may come before the legislature and the local and state managers are working unreservedly and openly for him.

W. H. Leedy, a well known business man, but in no sense a politician, is a candidate also from this county. He stands high with the business element and would make an excellent presiding officer, being quiet and unassuming and disposed to be fair in all matters. He is wanting in political foresight, however, for in announcing his candidacy for the speakership he also announced that he was opposed to rubbing the executive of the patronage. This was his death knell as far as the contest for speaker was concerned. His vote is doubtless the only one that he will get from the delegation of six representatives in this county.

There are several other candidates, but F. D. Merritt, of Lagrange county; J. G. Allen, of Daviess, and J. F. Sinterman, of Miami, are the most aggressive and about the only ones that will have any following outside of the Indianapolis candidates. These are swaying against Adams all the prejudice that exists against a candidate believed to be the choice of a machine, as well as the prejudice that naturally exists on account of his location. This county has the reputation of wanting the best of everything that is being distributed, and when Adams was brought out for speaker his candidacy was in line with the oft repeated chorus. There is prejudice against him on this account, and some of the local party workers, who want subordinate appointments, are disgruntled over the announcement that nothing but the speakership will be asked for if it is accorded to this county. They say that the party managers were not authorized to make any such pledges, and the fight has become so warm that Adams, himself, has been compelled to repudiate the statement. There is little doubt, though, that the legislature will hold the managers to the agreement should Adams be nominated.

Robert A. Brown, editor of the Franklin Democrat, seems to hold the cards for the principal clerkship of the house. He was a candidate for reporter of the supreme court at the recent state convention and came within a few votes of being nominated. His race was just close enough to make him sore over his defeat, and it is said that the legislative clerkship was promised him in order to hold him in line during the campaign. This, however, is no doubt an "invention of the enemy," for Brown's republicanism has been of the fiery brand, and there is no room in any other party for him. Editing a paper in a county where the majority is against him, he has done good work for the party, and his selection as clerk will be a deserved compliment. Benjamin Prather, of this city, and James Payne, of Connersville, are candidates against him, but the former will drop out of the race the moment Adams is nominated. All indications now point to the selection of Brown by the caucus, though the opposition is doing a creditable work against him.

H. B. Oglesbee, of Marshall County, has the call for the principal secretaryship of the senate. He is a member of the republican state central committee and has long been known as a hard party worker. Captain Gowdy, the redoubtable chairman of the state central committee, and, in fact, all the party managers are working for Oglesbee, and this gives him a prestige with the country members that could not be overcome. There were several candidates when it was first learned that the senate would be republican, but all save Oglesbee have now dropped out, and the race is regarded a certainty. D. H. Olive, of Boone county, and W. H. Ennis, of Gibson, are the two most aggressive candidates for the assistant secretaryship of the senate, they have succeeded in making the fight a warm one. Ennis presumed too much upon the name of his opponent, whom he expected to see waving the branch of peace when the fight came on, but he soon learned his error, and Olive armed himself with burning brands and entered the fray as if he had been anxious all the time for some foe worthy of his steel. Some of the friends of the two aspirants are looking to the entrance of a third party into the race, as so much is being said that a third candidate would find a hearty support. The caucuses of both parties will be held Wednesday night and the selections by the democrats will be made without a struggle. The party has nothing but an empty honor to bestow, and it is not that class that awakens either strife or enthusiasm.

THE POPE'S DECREE

Is Read in the Catholic Churches at Boston.

Catholics are Forbidden From Being Members of Different Secret Societies.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 7.—Archbishop John Williams has sent out the following letter to be read in all the churches of the diocese in Boston:

"Archbishop of Boston:

"REVEREND DEAR SIR:—We learn by letter from Rome, forwarded by His Excellency, the apostolic delegate at Washington, Most Holy Father has forbidden all Catholics to join the societies of Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias or Sons of Temperance. As to those who have already joined any of these societies they are to be admonished to withdraw from them, and if they refuse to do so, they are to be denied the sacraments.

"Yours sincerely,

[signed] "JOHN B. WILLIAMS,
"Archbishop of Boston."

TO CHANGE INSURANCE LAWS.

Terre Haute Property Owners Prepare Three Bills.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Jan. 7.—At a meeting of some of the largest property owners of this city with the representatives in the legislature from this county three bills to be introduced in that body this week were agreed upon. One is to declare invalid the provision in insurance policies which requires the insured to carry insurance to the amount of 80 per cent. of the value of the property to secure payment of the face value of the policy in case of total fire loss. Another is to amend the law which provides that a foreign company must have $200,000 paid-up capital stock to do business in the state. It is proposed to make the amount $100,000. The third is to amend the laws so that an Indiana company may be able to do insurance business as inexpensively as an outside company. Within the past year there has been a general increase in the cost of insurance and the people are resenting it.

Strike Broken.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 7.—The 110 inch mill at the Homestead steel works is working today and the strike at that place is broken. The mass meeting proposed for yesterday was not held. A crowd of four hundred men gathered but there were no speakers. All the furnaces at the Edgar Thompson works at Braddock are also working and the steel mill will resume tomorrow in all departments.

Short in His Accounts.

GALION, N. H., Jan. 7.—Wm. Powers, town marshal, has not been murdered as was feared, but has fled the country. A shortage in his account has been discovered and it is alleged the military authorities were about to take him for deserting the army.

Store Burned.

DE SOTO, Pa., Jan. 7.—The large general store of Bell, Lewis & Cates, the coal operators, burned here with a loss of $75,000. The company's miners are out on a strike and it is believed that the fire was of incendiary origin.

NOTABLE MURDER TRIAL

Begun in the Criminal Court at Indianapolis.

Winfred Smith, Who Spent a Portion in Dissipation, Arraigned for the Murder of Weston Thomas.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 7.—Winfred B. Smith was arraigned in the criminal court this morning for the murder of Weston B. Thomas. The regular jury was brought in and the special venire of the forty men called. The case will probably not go to the jury until some time next week.

The case is one of the most notable in the criminal calendar of Indianapolis for many years.

Smith is twenty five years of age of good family and is a stepson of Dr. Wands, one of the leading citizens of the state. Smith, although surrounded by the best of influences, had a tendency to go wild and was for some time known about town as a fast young man. Since arriving at the age of twenty one he has spent a good sized fortune, left by his father, in dissipation.

Smith killed Weston B. Thomas on Thursday morning July 12 at a resort near this city. Thomas was secretary and treasurer of the American Wire Nail works, of Anderson, and was about twenty eight years of age and worth $100,000. Thomas had been married about a year and his honeymoon had been spent in Europe. Both men were in liquor at the time of the murder, and the quarrel which brought it on was about a woman whom young Smith had taken to the resort in a buggy.

DIES IN A CHURCH.

Mrs. Susan Rowe, 74 Years Old, Drops Dead at Detroit.

DETROIT, Jan. 7.—Mrs. Susan Rowe, aged seventy-four, expired yesterday morning while at divine services in the Woodward avenue Baptist church, which she had attended for many years. She had been suffering from heart trouble for some time past, and against the advice of her physician she insisted on going to church even in stormy weather. On reaching the church she remarked to an usher that she did not feel well, and added that she could not stay away as it was communion Sunday, and she did not wish to miss the services. Just after Dr. Mallsardie, the pastor, finished the opening prayer Mrs. Rowe apparently fainted, and several persons who noticed her condition went to her assistance. She was lifted out of the seat and carried to the vestibule, where every effort was made to revive her, but without avail. She rapidly grew unconscious and gradually sank unto her death, which occurred fifteen minutes later. She came to this city in 1850 from England. One of her brothers, Rev. John Wilson, is a Congregational minister at Rockford, Ill.

VICIOUS DOGS

Attack a Young Girl and She May Die.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 7.—Maud Williams, aged ten years, was attacked by two dogs on Troy Hill, Allegheny, and was so badly injured that she may die. The little girl was walking along the street when she was set upon by a bull dog and a mongrel. A policeman was attracted by her cries and when he reached her the dogs had pulled her into the street and torn nearly all her clothes from her. Her legs and arms were terribly lacerated. The animals had to be beaten off with clubs. After a long chase both of the dogs were killed.

NEARLY WIPED OUT.

The Town of Hamlin, W. Va., Suffers a Severe Loss.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Jan. 7.—Hamlin, a small town and the county seat of Lincoln county, was almost wiped out by fire Saturday night. The fire originated in the Eagle flour mills and soon spread to the Hamlin handle factory, a large plant, and also to a large sawmill. All these buildings and several smaller ones were entirely destroyed. The origin of the fire and extent of loss are not known. There was little insurance.

Rising Rivers.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Jan. 7.—Rain has fallen here steadily for the past twenty-six hours and the river is rising rapidly. At Graniteville, up the Kanawha river, the water is twenty-three feet and rising. Timbermen predict immense damage. The steamer Oneida, a Kanawha river packet, was sunk here at midnight. The ice knocked a hole in her and she will be a total loss. C. E. Vandereder, a timber man says three thousand logs are passing into the upper pool in the Kanawha each hour.

National Bicycle Runs.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—The national bicycle show opened at the Coliseum armory today and will continue during the week. The exhibitions, besides showing high art in cycle manufacture in all its departments from the chain link to the complete machine, comprise a series of living pictures depicting the joys and sorrows of cycling, band concerts and the appearance of John S. Johnson, Tom Eck, Sanger, Zimmerman and other bicycle champions.

Japanese Minister.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 7.—K. K. Kato, the newly appointed Japanese minister to Great Britain, has arrived from Japan on the steamer China. Kato is one of the most distinguished and able diplomats in the Japanese service. Minister Kato does not expect to see the Chinese capital taken while he is here, but says that the great flood of cold weather into Pekin will probably cause the capture of the city. He will leave for the east this evening.

DIED SUDDENLY.

Death Removes One of Illinois' Statesmen.

Philip Sidney Post Attacked by Heart Disease and Died at His Boarding House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Philip Sidney Post, member of congress from the tenth district of Illinois, died at the Hamilton hotel, in this city, yesterday morning a few minutes after 4 o'clock.

Mr. Post was taken ill Saturday morning about 10 o'clock with a severe attack of indigestion, and his family physician, Dr. Robbins, was summoned. Temporary relief was afforded, but the indigestion was followed by heart trouble with which he had occasionally been afflicted in recent years, and his condition became serious toward evening.

About ten o'clock last night the symptoms of his disease became alarming and Dr. Lincoln was called in consultation by Dr. Robbins. Both physicians remained with the patient and various remedies were applied to encourage the action of the heart. But that organ failed to respond to the treatment and gradually failed. Shortly after 4 o'clock the end came, the wife, daughter and younger son of the dying son being with him to the last.

Prior to the assembling of the house the Illinois delegation held a meeting and prepared resolutions and a general plan of action concerning the death of representative Post. It was arranged that the Illinois delegation and a committee of members of the house should meet at the Hamilton hotel at 7 o'clock to accompany the remains to the depot. A detail of policemen will serve as active pall bearers. Sergeant-at-Arms Snow has designated his assistant, Mr. Stoeler, to accompany the funeral party to Illinois. The train leaves at 8:10, and the congressional party will be provided with a private car.

SENSATIONAL CHARGES.

Judge Augustus Ricks Accused of Wrong-doing.

S. J. Ritchie, a Wealthy Resident of Akron, is the Accuser and the Case Comes Up in Congress.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Charges of a sensational character against United States District Judge Augustus Ricks, of Cleveland, are contained in a memorial presented to the house of representatives today. Representative Johnson, of Ohio, secured immediate consideration for a resolution instructing the judiciary committee to investigate the charges and without debate the resolution was adopted. The charges are made under oath by Mr. S. J. Ritchie, of Akron, Ohio, a wealthy capitalist of that section. While directed mainly at Judge Ricks they indirectly affect Judge Burke and ex-United States Senator Payne, of Cleveland. Mr. Ritchie gives the names of a formidable array of counsel in Washington. Cleveland and Akron, who have been retained in his behalf. These include Messrs. Hemphill, Shellabarger & Wilson and Butterworth, of Washington; Kennch & Co., of Cleveland, and Judge Upson and Messrs. Green, Nray & Siobero, of Akron. The charges involve losses reaching $6,000,000. Mr. Ritchie claims to have suffered in decisions made by Judge Ricks affecting Canadian copper and nickel mines.

AN ENID EPISODE.

Two Loving Couples on a Little Spree.

They Run Across Policeman Williams and in the Melee One Man is Killed and the Other Wounded.

ENID, Jan. 7.—James Smith and James Brown, who lived twelve miles southwest of Enid, were in the city last evening in company with two women. Both men had six shooters belted around them and all four were under the influences of liquor. Night Watchman Dillon undertook to arrest them. They drew their pistols and Dillon fled and went for Chief of Police Williams. Smith and Brown again drew their revolvers, but Chief Williams was the quickest to shoot. Brown was instantly killed and Smith is mortally wounded. Intense excitement prevails and it is feared that more killing will follow.

FATHER DUCEY

Visits Satolli at Washington and is Pleasantly Received.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Father Ducey went to Washington last week to tender to Monsignor Satolli his New Year's congratulations. He stopped at the Arlington, but did not register. He was recognized by an ecclesiastic to whom he said he had made two calls on the Ablegate and that his reception had been of the most agreeable and friendly kind. It is believed in Catholic circles that nothing more will be heard of the difference between Archbishop and the belligerent rector. Father Ducey also called on Archbishop Corrigan and was cordially received.

It is reported that Bishop McDonnell of Brooklyn, will start for Rome on Saturday of this week by the direction of the holy see. Bishop McGrade, of Rochester, is also expected to sail within a few days to explain his recent attack on Archbishop Ireland. It is not known when Archbishop Corrigan will visit Rome. Cardinal Gibbons has gone to Cuba, it is stated, incidentally.

CARLISLE'S BILL.

It Meets the Approval of President Cleveland.

The Democratic House Caucus Will Urge the Passage of the Bill and Put it on a Vote Saturday.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—It has been found necessary to change the general plan of action on the Carlisle currency bill as a result of the death of Representative Post, of Illinois. The house democratic caucus assembles at 2 p. m. instead of 7:30 and been announced previously. The general debate, which was to have closed today with speeches by Representative Cox, of Tennessee, for the bill, and Sibley, of Pennsylvania, against the measure, and the closing of the debate by Mr. Springer, is necessarily thrown over until tomorrow. The caucus is expected to take into consideration the unexpected interruption and to give tomorrow to general debate. This will postpone the final vote until late in the week. Mr. Springer calculates that it will be taken next Saturday, but it is expected that the caucus will fix the exact time. The program for the caucus is pretty well outlined in advance. Mr. Springer, as the one in charge of the bill, will submit a resolution reciting in substance that it is the judgement of the democratic caucus that the Carlisle currency bill should pass. It will also direct the committee on rules to prepare a rule arranging the future debate and fixing a time when final vote is to be taken. The Springer resolution is likely to be the main issue of the caucus, as it embodies the views of those supporting the bill. Mr. Springer conferred with Secretary Carlisle this morning and it is understood outlined the plan of procedure. In this connection Mr. Springer and others connected with the management of the bill discredited the report that an entirely new currency bill is to be framed with administration approval. On the contrary they say they have direct and positive assurances that the bill as now before the house has the strong support of President Cleveland and Secretary Carlisle. Under these circumstances the house managers say the reports are misleading, that the administration contemplates urging an entirely new bill.

RAISING RAPIDLY.

The Ohio River Threatens to Flood the Country.

Going Up at the Rate of Eighteen Inches Per Hour, It Promises to Pass the Danger Line.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 7.—There is a probability of a flood at this point if the rivers continue to rise for any length of time at the present rate. There is a stage of seventeen feet in the Monongahela and it is rising at the rate of eighteen inches per hour. A large amount of ice is coming out of the Youghiogheny and at McKeesport the little steamer Tillie was sunk, causing a loss of about $2,000. The ice is also coming down the Allegheny and the Coffer dam at Herrs Island is in danger of serious damage. The government is building a navigation lock at this point and should the Coffer dam be broken it will not only cause considerable damage but will also retard the work on the lock. A twenty-five foot stage in the Ohio river is expected here and river men fear that it will reach thirty feet. Twenty five will flood the mills along the river and cause damage to property.

Thirty feet is considered the danger line. It has been raining all night and it is still raining. At Morgantown there was eighteen inches of snow when the rain started Saturday night, and it has rained steadily ever since. Several timber rafts have gone down, and a big boom is reported at Grafton. A twenty-eight to thirty foot stage is expected at Morgantown. The ice in the Clarion river broke at 7 a. m., and began pouring into the Allegheny. At points between Titusburg and the mouth of the Clarion the ice in the Allegheny is moving, though it is only broken in places. At Oil City the river is still frozen, and beyond there the ice remains firm, although a break is expected at any time.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 7.—Advices from southern Indiana to the News tell of disastrous floods, resulting from the heavy rains of the past forty eight hours. The farmers are suffering severely from the overflow and more serious losses still are anticipated. At Bedford, Ind., on the Monon road the bridge across the river has been washed away, and the trains are running via North Vernon. At Vienna, on the main line of the Jeffersonville, Madison and Indianapolis railroad, one hundred feet of track has been washed away and traffic is seriously delayed from both north and south.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 7.—The unprecedented rain fall here of 3.47 inches makes the total fall in twenty-four hours ending at 8 a. m. of 3.81 inches in the past 48 hours, has had the effect to carry the ice from the river without any damage whatever. Steamers say they never saw a safer break up. With the heavy rains reported from headwaters, and from nearly all the tributaries below, the river here is expected to go above forty feet, but no disaster of flood is expected, especially as the temperature is already falling and the rain fall seems to be ended. At noon the river was twenty-two feet, raising five inches an hour.

BELLAIRE, Ohio, Jan. 7.—The indications today are that the great flood of last winter is not repeated. The water is rising rapidly in consequence of incessant rain for the past thirty-six hours. The ice in the Ohio river and its tributaries broke up and ran out last night. Several barges were lost. Two bridges on the Cleveland, Lorain and Wheeling railroad were washed away. Trains could not be run yesterday and traffic on the road is completely blocked. Steamers at their moorings here were not damaged. All the snow has melted and is gone. The lowlands will be flooded by tomorrow morning. People are moving to higher grounds.

DRUGGED AND ROBBED.

Harry Gilbert's Saloon Raided by the Police.

Mrs. Callahan Says She Was Robbed in the Place of $11 One Night Last Week.

This noon the police swooped down upon Harry Gilbert's saloon, No. 226 Calhoun street, and arrested Robert E. Pocock, the bartender, and a young man named Betel. Both men were locked up at the police station upon a charge of robbery.

The police made the arrest upon information furnished by Mrs. Callahan, daughter of John Godfrey, the well-known Indian. Mrs. Callahan called at police station last Thursday and stated that the evening before she had been in Gilbert's saloon and had been drugged and robbed of $18 in cash, belonging to herself; $2 belonging to Mrs Fry, of Chicago street, and a clock for $25. These valuables were hidden in her stocking. Mrs. Callahan said she went into the saloon to see a friend and while there the bartender and some more men who were in the saloon asked her to drink. She drank a few glasses of beer and the liquor did not seem to effect her. At this, the woman says, the men asked her to favor the liquor with peppermint. They poured something into the beer which to the time she thought was peppermint, but which she afterward concluded was some kind of a drug as she at once went to sleep and did not awaken until long after midnight. She then found herself at the house of Mrs Fry with whom she had been rooming. She looked for her money and found it missing.

The police think they have a strong case against the two men arrested.

Last spring a man was drugged and robbed in the yard back of the same saloon.

CASUALTY COLUMN.

Slippery Pavements Cause a Number of Broken Limbs.

Fred Gallmeier, of 136 Francis Street, Contributes His Right Thumb to Machinery This Morning.

This morning Fred Gallmeier, of 136 Francis street, got his thumb caught in some machinery at the Western Gas and Construction company's works and the member was torn off. Dr. Duenling dressed the wound.

BROKE HER ARM.

Mrs. Catherine Doyle met with quite a serious accident Saturday evening. She fell and broke one of her arms and suffered intense pain. Two years ago Mrs. Doyle fell and broke the same arm. Her home is at 237 Clay street.

WENT HOME.

On Saturday evening Mrs. Harry White met with an accident at her home on Smith street. The lady started to visit a neighbor and had only gone a short distance when she slipped on the ice which covered the ground and fell, breaking her arm near the wrist.

SPLIT HIS

Yesterday morning a Hanna street electric car collided with John Nuckumm's dairy wagon at the corner of Hanna and Wallace streets. The wagon was smashed to kindling wood and the milk was spill about until the very gutters ran white.

CLIMBS DOWNS HERE.

The slippery streets Saturday night were productive of accidents. Capt. Harry Dickman fell at 8 o'clock in front of 34 East Main street and sustained a dislocation of the hip. He was taken to the Hope hospital in the patrol wagon, where the dislocation was reduced. Captain Dickman is an old soldier and lost an eye during the rebellion.

LOCAL LINES.

Miss Hulda Hankes beginner's class meets this evening.

M. M. Thompson, ex-county recorder went to Indianapolis this morning.

Miss Edith Phillips will not return to school at Terre Haute on account of the serious illness of her mother.

Christian Dolmeyer, aged seventy-four, died at his home in Washington township, last night. He had been insane for a long time. Interment at Huntertown.

The funeral of the late Arthur S. Hill, held this afternoon from the Trinity Episcopal church, was very largely attended, as few young men in Fort Wayne had so many warm friends as the deceased.

Cut to Pieces.

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 7.—A man who was run over and cut to pieces by a Kansas Pacific train, Saturday night, has been identified as John H. Eldredge, a water inspector. He is said to have a brother in Chicago who is a millionaire. As he never have been home for a number of years the brother has come to the city to look after the remains.

STILL THEY GET IT.

Saloon Men Who Adorn Mayor Oakley's Black List.

The Wayne Hotel Figures on by Way of Variety—Will be Tried Tomorrow.

Mayor Oakley had a grist of saloon men to grind over this morning and one prominent hotel mixed in for seasoning.

On the desk of Superintendent Liggett this morning was information against the following saloons

Flynn & Ward
F. C. Grindeorfer.
John O'Donnell
Charles Hollmiller.
Gus Jackson
Wayne hotel bar

The information against the Wayne hotel bar was for allowing the sale of liquor after 11 o'clock.

Against some of the saloons there was information for a half dozen or so violations and against Gus Jackson, whom the police have been watching exceedingly close, there were two charges.

In nearly every one of these cases there are from three to seven witnesses, and the officers feel confident that they will make the cases "stick," to use the police court term.

All day yesterday the police watched the various city hotels very closely and today Mayor Oakley will call upon some of them and talk exceedingly plain.

None of the cases against the saloons will come up today before the mayor on account of press of other business, but Col. Oakley stated to a SENTINEL representative that he would begin on them tomorrow morning.

POLICE COURT.

There was quite a police court this morning.

Frank Riley, Mrs Church, Henry Belon and Jack Runnee were all on trial for drunkeness and were sent to jail.

WERE FINED

Saturday afternoon, before Mayor Oakley, John Holmomip and H. A. Wiebke plead guilty to illegal selling of liquor and were fined $1 and costs.

Charles Comrade, the thirteen year-old boy who has been missing for a week past, has been found. Superintendent Liggett received a letter from Terre Haute saying that the boy was in custody in that city. When last seen young Comrade was near the reservoir lake and it was feared that he had come to harm. The boy will be returned to his home, 170 East Creighton avenue.

OTHER CASES.

In the court of Justice Harry Frances affidavits for selling liquor after 11 o'clock at night and on Sunday have been filed against Henry Wiebke, John O'Donnell, R. Beversfordes and Van Dorsey.

DUTY OF A MINISTER.

In the Pulpit He Should Not Advocate Either Political Party.

But He Should Denounce Sin and Political Corruption Wherever Found and Favor Municipal Reform.

The subject for discussion before the City Ministerial association this morning was "How far should the ministers participate in politics." The discussion was opened with a paper by Rev. J. W. Brown. The consensus of opinion was that every minister should denounce sin and political corruption in whatever party found, and yet should not permit himself to advocate any definite party in the pulpit as a means to secure much needed reforms. In the pulpit the minister has a peculiar mission to perform and yet in the pulpit as well as out of it, he is a man and a citizen. Condemnation can not be made too severe for the ministers and Christian men who do not ally themself upon the side of right in politics and especially in favor of municipal reform.

FRUIT IN IDAHO.

Mr. Jos. F. Ervin, Formerly of this City, Writes From Boise City.

Joe F. Ervin, formerly with The SENTINEL, who a few months ago, with his family, removed to the west is now located at Boise City, in the new state of Idaho, and writes from that place that he has greatly improved in health. The climate of Idaho is delightful. Some mornings, he says, are quite cold and frosty, but after 9 o'clock the weather is beautiful and resembles the month of May in Fort Wayne. Since living there he has not been troubled with catarrh, with which he was afflicted here, and he thinks the benefit to his health by removing there will be of a permanent character.

"I have had a craving appetite," he writes, "and am better in every way than I was when I left Fort Wayne. I will remain here until spring, and if the climatic advantages and benefits continue will without doubt locate here permanently and push the fruit business. The fruit business here for apples and prunes far exceeds California and equals it for pears and peaches. It was surprising to me to see the number of wealthy men who were putting out large orchards. My brother lives six miles from Boise City and has thirty acres in prune trees, ten of which are over four summers old. The trees are full of buds and the prospect for a big crop is good. They tell me that seven years old prune trees bore 700 pounds of prunes last year and the fruit sold for two cents a pound in the tree. The average size of the trees does not bear so much as this, but you can, nevertheless, realize from this the amount of money there is in the business."

Mr. Ervin writes interestingly about his trip west, giving a description of the country through which he traveled, and sends his regards to his many friends in this city.

TALKS OF A STRIKE.

Street Car Employees and the Company Disagree.

A Grievance Committee Meeting With the Officials of the Lines—Both Sides Interviewed.

For the past few days there have been rumors of another street car strike. The SENTINEL has refrained from making mention of the fact, hoping that the troubles between the men and the company might be settled in an amicable manner and the city be spared from scenes such as took place during the last street car strike.

The rumors, however, have become so prevalent that they were all morning the topic of conversation upon the streets.

About noon a SENTINEL representative called at the office of the street car company for the purpose of interviewing General Manager S. F. Robison with regard to the reported trouble. Mr. Robison was not in and the chief clerk, Mr. Gerke, was not willing to make any detailed statement, preferring that Mr. Robison be seen by the reporter. Elsewhere, it was learned that the street car men's greatest grievance was against Foreman Tony Lynch, who was recently placed in charge of all the men. Ed Teasley, foreman at the east barn, was relieved of his foremanship. Teasley seems to have been a general favorite with the employes and Lynch is not held in such high esteem. The company, however, states that Lynch is one of their best employes and has been with them for the past twenty years almost. One of the men at the company's office said:

"I consider Lynch one of the most efficient men in our employ and nearly everyone who knows him has a good word to say for him."

It was further learned at the company's office that the union objected to the discharge of three of the men who have had permanent places on the track work. "Since our recent improvements," said Mr. Gerke, "we can find no use for these men in their former capacity, but they were placed on the extra list as were the twelve men laid off by the recent reduction in the number of the cars. Just as soon as spring opens, however, all these extras will be cared for by the company as we contemplate vastly improved service when the season permits.

PRESIDENT ORR INTERVIEWED.

President Orr, of the street car men's union, was seen at noon by a reporter. He said: "This talk about a strike being called for 10 o'clock this morning was not true. No strike could be called without the consent of the national executive board of which I am a member. I will admit there are some differences of opinion between the company and our union and summing them all up in a nut shell we do not believe the company is furnishenough work for the number of men who are still in their service but are not allowed to earn what they should. For instance, there are fifteen or eighteen extra men who will only make a trifle for the next few months. Now there are no conductors on either the Spy Run or Lawls street lines. The motormen on these lines are compelled to do two men's work. We want some of the extras put to work on these lines. It is a fact that the men do not like Lynch, and there are some other grievances."

This afternoon at THE SENTINEL goes to press, a grievance committee of three men from the Street Car Men's union is in conference with the company. There is no knowing at this hour of writing what will be the outcome of the conference.

Frank DeHass Robison, principal stockholder, of Cleveland, is in the city and is meeting with the grievance committee

THE SOUDER CASE

Will be Tried in the Circuit Court on February 17.

Depositions of the Defendants Will be Taken Next Monday—Another Divorce Case.

The attorneys in the case of Daniel W. Souder against G. E. Everett and N. B. Leonard, for libel, appeared before Judge O'Rourke in the circuit court this morning and the trial of the case was arranged for February 14th.

Next Monday the taking of the depositions of the defendants will be resumed before a notary public.

Martha Bush has commenced in the circuit court an action for a divorce from James Bush. Cruel treatment is alleged. E. V. Emrick is attorney for the plaintiff.

E. V. Emrick was in Milan township Saturday trying cases before Justice Snyder.

Mr. F. L. Danforth, a clerk in the general managers office of the Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad, has composed and published a very pretty waltz song, entitled "Another's," which has made a tremendous hit in Grand Rapids. At the solicitation of his railroad friends he has placed it on sale in Fort Wayne. It can be found at the music store of

THE city council will meet tomorrow night when the screen ordinance will come up for consideration. This measure should become a law.

THERE is a big scramble for the offices which the Indiana legislature have to give out. The situation is reviewed in our telegraph columns today.

A TOPEKA man made one set of physicians think he was failing so in health that he needed an increase of pension and on the day after he convinced another set that he was a good risk for life insurance. And still there are people who scout at hypnotism.

ON JANUARY 1 the income tax law went into operation. A person with a yearly income of $4,000 or below is exempt from taxation, but all of an income of over $4,000 is assessed 2 per cent. A person having an income of $5 000 must pay an annual tax of $20

IN a recent address at Queen's hall, London, Mr. Asquith said: "The overcrowding in London is terrible. There are about 400,000 persons living in rooms of one room, and 900,000 living two or more in a single room." In Clerkenwell and Whitechapel 'over one-third of the population live more than two in a room'"

CHRISTENSAY LODGE, a champion of civil service, has given notice of two amendments he will offer which have for their object the extension of the civil service. One is amendatory of the bill making appropriation for the diplomatic and consular service, and puts that entire service, after three years, in the classified service. It is similar to the bill introduced by Mr. Lodge, December 18 last. The second amendment applies to the urgent deficiency bill, and provides that all offices created by the income tax law shall be placed in the classified service and filled from the eligible lists of the civil service.

A GENTLEMAN who knows whereof he speaks says that if the screen ordinance ever becomes a law many young girls in this city will be saved from ruin and degradation. In several saloons in Fort Wayne girls can be found every night in the darkened rooms after 11 o'clock and until the early morning hours. Pass the screen ordinance and these night revelries and debauches would come to an end.

FOR the present at least it will be safe to trust the pledges England has given our department of state in the Bluefields affair. Great as are British interests in controlling all possible approaches to the trans-isthmian routes, the firmness of the United States in asserting the Monroe doctrine left the English government no other course than a polite repudiation of all desire to control the Mosquito reservation.

WHAT action congress will take to end the growing tank complications between this government and the European powers, or whether any measure will be adopted for that purpose are questions clouded in uncertainty. Considering the importance of the tariff war to commercial interests the attention given to it by members of congress is notably slight. Chairman Wilson, of the ways and means committee, recently introduced a bill, in accordance with the recommendation in the president's message, to repeal the one-tenth of a cent differential on sugar which evoked protests from Germany and Austria and which, it is stated, inspired retaliatory action by the former government in the form of prohibition of American beef. But it is not altogether certain that this ways and means committee will report this bill to the house nor is it at all assured that the house will pass it in case it emerges from the committee and is given a hearing. Mr. Wilson was asked about the prospects of the bills but did not speak enthusiastically of them. He said, in answer to a question, that its claims for consideration might be brought to the attention of the rules committee after the currency bill had been disposed of but added that the remaining time of this congress was very short and there would be a great pressure upon the committee for allotments of time for various other important bills.

Why We Sleep.

Probably nobody with any heart and imagination or spirit of scientific inquiry in his brain has failed to sit up nights, so to speak, to find out how he goes to sleep. It is a discovery that none has yet made. One moment we are found awake. Next thing we know we have been sound asleep for a longer or shorter time. The process of awakening seems more gradual, and then we often catch glimpses of what the mind has been about during the sleep life. These glimpses indicate that our sleep life is far more wonderful than our waking life. Dr. Henry Wurz contributes to The Popular Science Monthly a paper on the chemistry of sleep. He compares natural slumber with the process of going to sleep under anaesthetics. Among the substances that produce insensibility none is better known than what is commonly called carbonic acid gas, known to chemists as carbon dioxide gas. Its properties are so well understood that Parisians of the poorer class occasionally commit suicide by shutting themselves up with a vessel of burning charcoal. Its fumes lull them to sleep, and they never wake again. Now, in our bodies, by mental and muscular exertion, this same gas is produced in large quantities during the day. The system is therefore more or less overloaded with it. This produces the tired, sleepy feeling. Dr. Wurz thinks, and finally makes us drop off into the land of dreams. During our state of quiescence and repose we do not produce the carbon gas in such quantities. The large amount already in our systems is eliminated through the lungs and through the insensible perspiration of the skin.

The absence of the gas in the morning makes us feel bright, wide awake and refreshed. Then we can conquer the world. We found out of bed and begin the next day's work, expanding our forces, generating in our bodies the carbon dioxide and loading up with it, all ready for sweet Mother Nature to rid us of it once more at night.

The Sun Do More.

John Jasper, the negro preacher, always stuck to it that the sun did move, and Jasper was right. In fact, so far as has been discovered, it has not only one motion, but three.

First it revolves on its axis. Astronomers know this by the regular recurrence and disappearance of the sun spots. It takes the sun nearly a month of our days to turn around once—more than a lunar month, in fact, for the mean time of its axial rotation is 25½ days. Its next motion is not so well understood. But it has been found that our great sun itself revolves slowly around the center of gravity of the whole solar system, wherever and whatever that is, just as the magnetic pole of the earth is believed to have a motion around in a small circle. Very delicate mathematical instruments have been employed to discover the motion of the sun around the center of gravity.

Besides these two there is another motion which would be calculated to affright the timid if its goal and aim were not so very far off. Wire men have discovered that the sun, with all its planets trailing after it, is rushing at breakneck speed into the constellation Hercules, in due time to be swallowed up by that constellation. The speed at which we are all flying toward Hercules is considered by the best authorities on the subject to be at less 150,000,000 miles a year. But that monster shall not get there in our lifetime nor our children's.

The Union army is meeting with many foes. The next encampment of veterans of the G. A. R. will be held in Louisville in 1895. The opening day will be Sept. 8. The next to the town in south annual meeting of the G. A. R.

A New Labor System.

The United States labor commissioner, Hon. Carroll D. Wright is certain that a new system of work and wages must be devised which shall do entire justice to both capital and labor and at the same time recognize the moral forces at work constantly amongst us with the industrial forces.

In a paper in The Forum, Mr. Wright asks two questions: First, shall a man conduct his business as he pleases? Second, during periods of depression, must the savings or reserve fund of labor be drawn upon, while the savings of capital, or its reserve fund and dividends, remain intact? To the first of these questions the labor commissioner finds a ready answer. A man may not conduct his business as he pleases when by so doing he interferes with the convenience, business, health or comfort of his neighbors or the public. Society has already declared its right to interfere with private business that damages the health or interests of the public. Illustrations of this are given in the case of factories whose products and refuse are deleterious to health or property owners whose land is necessary to the public good. If a man seeks to make a fence, or turn a water course in such a way as to damage his neighbor, the law steps in and says he shall not do it. In the same way society has the right to step in and compel a man to arbitrate or turn over his business to somebody else who will arbitrate when large numbers of people are damaged by his refusal to do either. "The impairment of capital is the loss of labor; the impairment of labor is the loss of capital."

The second question, whether capital should not draw on its reserve funds in hard times, just as well as labor, Mr. Wright leaves to his readers to answer. He merely asks whether, when workmen are idle, they must use up all their savings to live on, while the dividends of capital are the same and its reserve fund remains full, or whether there should not be some mutual sharing of burdens. The answer to this question will go far toward settling the labor question, the writer thinks.

Mr. Wright remarks incidentally that those corporations that voluntarily raise in good times the wages cut down in bad times rarely have strikes. It is the certainty that their pay will not be raised again without a strike and a fight that makes workingmen so savage when their wages are reduced.

The German Parliament.

In the German empire the legislative branch of government is not constructed on the lines that rule in most countries. There are two houses, but they do not correspond to our representative chamber and senate.

When the consolidation of the German states into an empire took place under Bismarck's sway, there was formed the bundesrath. The confederation of the different states formed a council to sit at Berlin. The federation itself was called a "bund," or bond; its council was the "rath." Delegates are appointed by the rulers of the separate states as members of the bundesrath. These form a council to deliberate on measures for the good of the whole empire. When they decide on a "bill, they frame it and recommend it to the imperial legislature, which is called the reichstag. If the reichstag see fit, it passes the act the bundesrath has prepared, and the bill becomes a law when the emperor's signature is affixed.

It is not necessary, however, for an act to originate in the bundesrath. It may originate in the reichstag and be passed. But the bundesrath has the same veto power enjoyed by the British house of lords. Members of the emperor's cabinet also frame bills for the reichstag to pass.

The members of the reichstag are elected by the people. Emperor William is one of the most arbitrary rulers that ever sat on the German throne, and he is fully persuaded that he represents the Almighty to the German people, yet he makes a great show of patronizing the reichstag, so when he opened its sessions in person in a characteristic speech at the dedication of the new and splendid parliament house. But for all that, if this reichstag elected by the people to make laws for them does not pass his pet bills for raising money or for suppressing socialists, he will dissolve it in a hurry and order a new election.

Betrayed Himself.

A criminal is also a fool. This was never more fully demonstrated than in the case of Seely, the defaulting bookkeeper of the Shoe and Leather bank in New York. He got away in safety to Chicago. He dyed his mustache and was living quietly as a lodging boss. If he had kept his mouth shut and continued living quietly and had shaved off his mustache instead of dying it, the chances is that he could have got safe out of the country in a little while. But, no! The place where the detective finally found him may give a hint of what he has done with all the money he has been helping to steal during ten years. Horse races now in progress at Chicago. Seely went to these and "played the races."

At the races he picked up acquaintance with an agreeable stranger. First he told the agreeable stranger that his name was Evans. Then as they drank and bested together, he told his real name was Dale. That set the agreeable stranger, in reality Detective McFarland, to thinking. He suspected this was Seely. Three were more betting and a good deal more drinking together. Then at last the defaulter confidentially and voluntarily told McFarland that he was Seely. He told on himself. Immediately McFarland got drunker yet and went to the police office and had Seely arrested. When the arrest was really made, the detective went on a bigger drunk than ever. At this it is a question whether the $3,000 reward he gets will do him much good.

It would be the making of the Rio Grande valley if the proposed huge dam and reservoirs should be built across the Rio Grande river at El Paso, storing the waters in the rainy season as they could be used at need in the dry season. This much is plain. But is it quite as plain that the United States government should build that dam? Why would it not be better for some of our great capitalists who are now willing to get 2 and 3 per cent for their money to invest it in this great work? It would be a dead sure investment.

Alaska has a newspaper which is published but once a year.

SOON after Mr. Vincent had taken the lead in the criminal investigation department of the English police chief quarters he called me into his office.

"Jarnold," said he, do you happen to know this place at all," handing me a slip of newspaper.

It was an auctioneer's advertisement. "An old-fashioned family residence, commanding extensive views," etc.

"Oh, yes, sir. I have lived in Nottingham," I answered. "That's one of the haunted houses in that neighborhood. My landlady could have talked a year about it. It inclines remains of a very old building."

"Very good. In fact, Van Tornow and Prettygape both said you knew those parts. Well, the family, intimate friends of ours, cannot sell the property, and as the little peculiarities of the ghosts you have been told about verge on larceny, I think you may as well combine your August outing with a stroke of business that way."

"Very well, sir."

That was enough for me. I ran down by the night train and went over in the morning to the cottage in Sherwood forest, where I had formerly lodged. At the first mention of Gunthorpe Manor, Mrs. Wingood chattered as volubly as ever. The ghost had not been laid by the demolition of the bulk of the antique structure, but perambulated the modern house and grounds. Vexed at its old haunts being annulled it revenged itself by tormenting the guests, and had taken away articles of jewelry from several sleeping rooms, not even sparing the Countess Massarene, who had been given the grand old bachelor's chamber where James I. had been welcomed.

I went back to the town and saw the family solicitor. The articles lost by visitors up to the latest and most important disappearance of Lady Massarene's casket had not been seen by pawnbrokers'. The police told me that they had not come upon them. I could answer for London's and Van Tornow had investigated Holland and Hamburg.

I remarked to the lawyer "that the thefts have been perpetrated by some one who does not need money or who is unable to dispose of his plunder from being green to the job."

Within letter from Mr. Waschuger to Mr. Gunthorpe to blind the servants to my true position, I drove over to the house.

It was very large since the thick walls of the castle had been preserved, though the tower and ramparts had been destroyed. I doubt not that the Sherwood forest robbers had held it even against forces from the town and Nottingham castle. The latter commanded it with modern artillery, but in its days of glory

it would have mocked at its brass dragons. There was a moat with running water, in which one could fish out of the bedroom window, while the rabbits, always plentiful hereabouts, seemed showered over the capacious park, which merged into the forest itself.

Mr. Gunthorpe was a hearty old gentleman, a little bluff at first, with bowed shoulders, but alert under his gray hair. His mother seemed quite as likely to outlive him as his recently wedded wife, a town lady who had evidently been made nervous by the mysterious purloinings. Mr. Gunthorpe was good enough to introduce me as a friend of Waschager, and a gentleman connected with the law. I was rather timid at first, till I felt my head, but bless you, the strange robberies had frightened away these rich friends, and the twenty people in the large reception room were such as had nothing to lose and went to bed with their watches under their pillows. I kept quiet, but I was as much at home on those who had been staying a whole week.

They were rather jolly, and indeed were having a rare laugh at Mrs. Gunthorpe, feeble, for having mistaken the wooden effigy of Robin Hood in the principal bedroom for a living man and spoken of it. There were others that I who had never seen it, and so I had no need to suggest that one should have a peep at it.

It was really a clever effigy to have been carved in times gone back. It was cut out of the oak against which Robin Hood had made his last stand to the legal authorities. He was clad in green, the texture of the cloth well represented by graining the wood, quite like-ire, and on a low pedestal, like the figures of a waxwork show. It was all painted up in natural colors. He had a bow and a string of wire in his hands, and leaned a trifle forward on it with a sort of mocking smile, and as he laughed at the idea of his ever being captured. I have seen the same expression on many a superior rogue.

I do not know that I examined the statue more particularly than the others, because I was studying their faces and those of the butler and another servant who had come along to open the door. I fancied that Mr. Butler gave a slight start when his master bade him prepare this room, not for the persons of quality who were of the party, but for plain Mr. Gregorie, as I was announced to be. Mr. Butler was very assiduous toward me at dinner, if not agreeable, by ordering the footmen not to neglect me, and, if I had not been on my duplicity, I saw that he would have liked me to have shared a bottle with him in his own room.

However, I lay down that night in the huge room in reflect upon the legend, and whether, as I had the impression from the start, it was not related to the thefts of the present time. The big bed was very comfortable, and cajoled one off to sleep as if he had been given a soothing syrup. Still I had time to reflect on the legend told me.

In the days of the foresters of Sherwood, the owner of Leeking castle, who lived on but terms with the greenwood rovers, from his cherished his deer as private property, was informed by a warden that a man in the hateful green of the outlaw rieslers had been prowling around all the morning and was suspected by the sentinel of having climbed in at a window. My lord had his own opinion of the object of his visitor's call, and when he saw his young and beautiful daughter confused at his question, he had simply failed her to the ground—brute that he was—and rushed, foaming at the mouth and with sword and dagger drawn, all over the castle, crying out: "Maine and faggot for the deer stealers!" But the follower of the free woodmen was not to be found, and what made the sting of defeat the keener, when the lord returned to torture his daughter into a revelation she had vanished like a spectre. Then, only then, he remembered that the monks had talked of a secret cell, where their prior had hidden from an ancestor of his. He ordered close guard without and within and rode over to the priory. But the monks pretended to ignorance, and he went home more furious than ever. For days he lived like a hermit in the room where he had last seen his child, sleeping with drawn sword between two wolf dogs, but his watch resulted in nothing. Isabel and the young forester were never seen more.

Dreaming is something I am not given to unless I have not had my regulation "go" at tobacco. I certainly had smoked a couple of cigars—very fine—but I longed for a pipe. That made me restless, and I had the dullest serving up of my thoughts—faces that I had not seen for twenty years, and those of the last day—a jumble so that I hardly knew where I was spending the night. I daresay I was tired, too. Anyhow, I remember just as I had reasoned out that, as the house walls were identical with those of the old castle, there might still exist the secret hole, I heard a twang like a bow string let go after a hasty pull. I am not sure I woke, but fancy I recalled a kind of human figure in light colors cross the room and return with a companion. There was a jingle, as of coin, and I went off to sleep again, sound as a stone. So I thought. But I woke up with a start, cold as if I had been plunged in ice water, and then I was out of the clothes, standing beside Robin Hood. I rubbed my eyes, for the scoundrel seemed to be nodding to me for a moment and grinning, and I could swear the bowstring was vibrating, but, of course, the moment I put my finger and thumb to it that stopped the thrill. I walked all around it in the dark. Then I lit the candle, and made a thorough search of the room. But the wainscoting had been painted and varnished in these five years, and there was not a crack that I could decide to be a panel. I lost my temper at being so baffled when I was confident of being on the right track, and stamped my foot. The good old oaken plank yielded not a jot to my rage, but I heard something like the clash of metal in the direction of the statue. I ran over to it and gave it a shake. I might as well have worked with the giant oak it was hewn from. Nothing gave way, though I believed there was an echo of the metallic sound, within or below. I knocked on the wood in all parts with the massive extinguisher of the candlestick, but it did not seem hollow.

I sat down on the table, swinging my legs as I reflected, wrapped up in the soverlet till morning, only removing my gaze from the statue to scrutinize the room. Mr. Gunthorpe found me there when he came, in anticipation of the servant's call to breakfast. He was not a house for gongs or bells. He was too agitated to notice my curious position.

"Mr. Brooker, the short gentleman with red whiskers," cried he, "has been robbed of his pocket book in the night. What on earth am I to do with this deputation going on, sir?"

He fairly wrung his hands in despair, as if he had lost all hope now that the London detective had not been his palladium.

"Will you please leave me here? Send me breakfast, meanwhile, and go learn if anyone else has been disturbed."

He returned simultaneously with the servant and his tray of tea and toast, anchovy and eggs, with an even more deplorable look.

Pantler, the butler, was missing, and his wife was sure the ghost of Robin Hood had spirited her poor, dear John away.

I remembered the nocturnal visions, the one that had become two, the twang of the bowstring, and I said when the footman withdrew:

"I would not like you to laugh at me, sir, but the key to the mystery is held. I am confident, by this grinning monster in Lincoln green."

"Eh?" astounded as if I had purposely cutting his grandfather's portrait into whip snippers.

"There is a hole in the wall or floor somewhere, here or there, and the handle to the trap or panel is in this figure. And the machinery is in actual use, for I should have heard the creak if it was let get rusty. I've felt the thing all over, and found nothing, though, like a boss, I'm a boss' puzzler, sir, that's what it is!"

"Dear me! Bless me!" said he, rubbing his chin in the hollow of his hand. "The eyes don't move, do they?" as if it made any difference whether they did or not.

"More like the hands," I blurted out, conjecturally. "Do you see? I mean the bow! I'll have a good pull at the bow, anyway!"

You are welcome not to believe it, but when I put one hand to the bow and the other to the wire chord and pulled at the first while a-pushing at the other they bowed apart wide, and as the bow ends came down the figure bent in the middle and ducked its head and shoulders, as if to make a back for leapfrog.

"And sir," I said, "if you will turn your eyes yonder you'll see that the bow has done the trick."

A yard square panel of the wainscotting had slid right down below the floor level, clean as a whistle. We ran up and looked down. It was an easy jump, and a candle box was put there for a step. The cell was not as large as you could give a promenade concert in, but it would hold a Daniel Lambert without squeezing him tight. There was a very tidy collection of empty sardine boxes and American provision tins, showing that good living does not depend on the length of your dining table. But the birds had flown. There were two or three jewel cases, empty also, under my feet when I stepped down. There was a puff of cold air.

"There is another opening," said I. "You may come down and look around for the skeleton of your great-great-grandfather, if you like, sir"—nettled by his still looking, struck all of a heap, and this was nothing so wonderful, after all. "I am going to push straight on and see where the business comes out."

I nearly broke my neck by falling down some steps in the walls, but after that it was smooth sailing into the open air. It was not in the woods that we were to overtake the butler and a young woman who had begun by helping him to reduce the larder stock, and then took care of the property which he stole from the guests. They had managed it neatly. When she was afraid to tackle the guest in the Robin Hood room she would open the door to let him in; or if he had robbed the tenant of another chamber, she likewise opened the way for his passing the goods to her in her receptacle. For caution's sake she dwelt there as long as possible without change. Luckily for the owners, the precious pair had intended to elope with their spoil when complete, and nearly all the valuables were recovered, and quite a show they made in the justices' private room at the town hall. Mr. Pantler was "nailed" at Derby, she nearer London. The trial was brushed through without more evidence than sufficed to convict, as Lady Massarene did not want any parade made over her name. The hole in the wall was filled up. Master Robin was put out in the gardens when Mr. Gunthorpe died recently, and his still young tendan had a gas tube stuck in the bold poacher's head instead of the bow, which I had pulled to good purpose.

Animals Predict Danger.

If men were not too proud to learn from animals they might be warned of many dangers. It was noticed for several days before the terrible earthquake in the Riviera a few years ago that the horses in that district acted very strangely. They would stop suddenly, and for no apparent reason would tremble violently from head to foot. When the disaster came, those who had noticed the terror of the animals concluded that they must have heard subterranean noises or felt a trembling of the earth so slight that man had not perceived it. It has also been stated that the birds took flight from Hamburg a few days previous to the cholera epidemic in that city two years ago, and it is supposed that they found the air pestilential.

Testing the Quality of an Umbrella.

"The best way to test the value of an umbrella," observed a young man, "is to use it for a walking stick on a plank sidewalk. If the umbrella is not worth carrying home it will not catch between the planks. If it is fairly good it will catch occasionally and break where it can be mended. If it is extra good, it will snap in three places and the jagged ends will stick through the cover."

Wise Little Mary.

Little Mary was overheard talking to herself:

"For your sake so pure and sweet
Makes my happiness complete,
And I wonder at your feet,
Sweet Marie"

"I wonder what was the matter with her feet, anyway."

ALL HABIT.

The Son of Toil Had One, Which He Couldn't Shake.

"Habit, habit, habit! How it binds a man with chains of iron!" exclaimed the temperance lecturer out of a job dramatically.

"And that's right, too," commented the son of toil.

"Ah, my friend, you seem to have had some experience with habits!" said the lecturer.

"You bet I have," replied the other. "That's what raises all the misery of my life."

The lecturer glowed with pleasure. Here right before him was a terrible example, and he proceeded to draw the moral out.

"You have felt the irresistible craving which drags you down, without your better nature to crying out against it!"

"That's me."

"You have realized that your habit was hurrying you to the grave at breakneck speed, and yet you have felt that you could not resist it!"

"You bet."

"It has robbed you of sleep and reduced you of food, made you bleary-eyed, nervous and physically exhausted!"

"Many and many a night, sir, I've gone without a supper from thinking of it, and it has got to be a common practice to go for long spells without eating when the pressure comes."

"You have starved your family and let your children go to rags because of it!"

"Well, hardly that. My benefiting habit has taken care of my family in pretty good shape."

"You don't mean that you mean—drink?"

The son of toil looked puzzled, but he answered, "No."

"Ah, I see, you have not yet reached the lowest stage of degradation, and you think to escape it. But let me warn you, my friend, you will not unless you overcome your habit. Resolve to conquer it. You can if you try."

"Well, I don't know. I sometimes think it would be pretty quiet living if I should break it off."

"No, no, no! You would be a free man. You would feel such joy as you never before had felt in your life. Your wife would fall on your neck in tears of thankfulness. Come, my friend, the demon has not yet an unbreakable clutch upon you. Sign the pledge never to drink!"

"Pshaw! Why, I never drank a drop in my life. What are you giving me?"

"But I thought you said you knew the power of habit; that you had felt the craving which you could not resist; that you had spent nights without sleep and days without food; that you were being dragged down to an early grave!"

"I have, but I didn't the drink habit. What's done all that to me, preacher, is the overwork I've had ever since I was a boy of working."—Buffalo Express.

In Early Youth.

"I was not aware that you knew him," said Tom Snack to an Irish friend the other day.

"Know him!" he exclaimed. "I knew him when his father was a lad!"—Burlington (Ia.) Gazette.

And Then He Was Shown the Door.

"I have here," said the sculptor, "a plaster cast of a young woman of Boston."

"I see," said his visitor genially. "The pale cast of thought, so to speak."—Chicago Record.

RAILWAYS AND SHOPS.

David Roche Has an Arm Badly Pinched.

Bert Mills Loses Two Fingers in a Pair of Shears—The Electric Light's Long Distance Telephone.

David Roche, a freight brakeman on the Pittsburg road, had his right arm painfully pinched between the drawbars of train 79, on the Pittsburg, last Saturday night. Mr. Roche was brought in this city and taken to St. Joseph hospital, where Dr. G. H. Stemen dressed his injured arm. The bones were not broken and the arm will be saved. David is the son of Blacksmith James Roche, of the Pittsburg shops.

LOST TWO FINGERS.

LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

At the office of the electric light works on Saturday was placed a long distance telephone, which now puts that establishment in direct communication with all the large cities of the union. After it was installed, Mr. McDonald was called up at his office in New York City and interviewed at some length upon important business matters. A duplicate set has also been placed in the private office of Mr. G. S Knight, who can now talk with Chicago, St. Louis, New York, Boston and all the other cities in which the agents of the Fort Wayne Electric corporation reside.

MINOR MENTION.

C. O. Gouk, machinist in the Pittsburg shops, is sick and off duty.

C. H. Habsoher, a painter, has secured employment in the Pittsburg paint shops.

Edward Leach, the veteran tank builder at the Pittsburg shops, is sick and off duty.

H. G. Ricke, late of Diether & Sarrows, has taken a position in the Pittsburg car shops.

Pittsburg coaches 32 and 168 went into the Fort Wayne shops this morning to be repaired.

John Wolf, who had a foot injured a few days ago, resumed work at the Bass shops this morning.

John McCarthy and George Anweiler, of the Pittsburg shops, have resumed work after an illness.

J. H. Furlong, G. A. Garlow and W. C. Reffett, Nickel Plate brakemen, have resumed their duties on the road.

Blacksmith Henry Tonning, who was sick a few days last week, resumed his duties in the Pittsburg shops this morning.

F. Gephardt, of the Pittsburg lumber yards, is kept from his duties by the illness of some of the members of his family.

John O'Harra has taken a position in the Wabash shops.

A. C. Beaver, of the Fort Wayne Lumber company, is quite sick.

John Murphy, of the Wabash boiler shop, is off duty on account of sickness.

This morning the electric light works shipped the machinery for a 1,500 light plant to Jersey City.

After a week's illness, Samuel Hillicker, Pittsburg engineer, has resumed charge of his engine.

H. K. Rebling, Wabash boilermaker, is suffering with an ulcerated tooth, and is unable to work.

Henry Sommers, machinist in the Pittsburg shops, is suffering with a bad cold and lame back and is off duty.

C. J. DeVilbiss resumed work in the Wabash machine shops this morning, having recovered from his recent illness.

J. H. Klein has been appointed trainmaster of the Chicago and Erie road at Huntington, vice O. F. Gross, deceased.

Joseph Weinat, of the Chicago and Erie shops at Huntington, has returned home after a pleasant visit in this city.

Foreman Joseph Slater, of the Bass blacksmith shop, left this morning for a short tour of Ohio cities in the interest of the firm.

During the year 1894 only 695 locomotives were built in this country. In 1893 the number was 2,011, and in 1892 it was 2,012.

Foreman George Shisler, of the Anthony Wayne paint shop, resumed work this morning. He has been quite sick with tonsilitis.

C. A. Dessaure has been appointed general passenger agent of the Memphis and Charleston road, vice B. W. Wren, resigned.

Henry Reike, the locomotive tender builder in the Pittsburg shop, is still suffering with sore eyes. He has not worked for six weeks.

Roadmaster Adams, of the Wabash, who was thought to be fatally ill two months ago, is well and looking after business with old-time energy.

C. D. Schuemann and C. A. Kreese, carpenters employed by the Wabash, are taking a vacation for the purpose of attending to private business.

J. S. Lee, Nickel Plate fireman, is suffering from the effects of an accident, which happened last Thursday, when one of his hands was badly burned.

A. W. Noyes has been appointed traveling passenger agent of the Chicago Great Western for Indiana and Illinois and J. A. Granger for Ohio.

Machinist William Alstaugh, of the Bass works, who is suffering with fever, is much improved, but it will be several days before he will be able to work.

Henry Nyland, of the Bass machine shop, and his family are sorely afflicted with typhoid fever. Mr. Nyland has been unable to work since Christmas.

Sylvester Richards, watchman at the electric light works, is entertaining his brother, who lives at South Omaha and whom he had not seen for eleven years.

District Passenger Agent E. O. Thompson has received a new ticket stamp which reads "Wabash Union Station," the new name for the Wabash depot.

George Waldschmith, of the Pittsburg planing mills, who has been sick for over a week, suffered relapse Saturday, and will not be able to work for some days.

In 1865 the rate on a car-load of live stock, Indianapolis to New York, was $150, in 1870, it dropped to $100. In 1875, to $75, and there stood when the inter state commerce act went into effect The roads then based rates on the tonnage carried, which makes the present rate on an ordinary carload of live stock $52

As an indication of the dull times the Peru Journal states that over 200 men applied for work at an ice house in that city where only ten men were needed.

J. G. Ruple, late district passenger agent of the Pennsylvania company, will, on January 15, become one of the district passenger agents of the Baltimore and Ohio.

Next Thursday is pay day at the Bass works, Indiana Machine works, Fort Wayne Iron works, Peter Box and Lumber company and Horton Manufacturing company.

Chief Dispatcher W. H. Tigar, of the Pittsburg, has gone to Earl Park, Ind., on business connected with his office as grand regent of the Royal Arcanum. He will return home tomorrow.

Harry Crawford, jr., states that the Chicago and Southwestern is arranging to purchase six engines. The company has suffered seriously in its business the last few months for lack of power.

Eugene Mclaughlin, of the electric light works, who was unable to work for several days because of the serious condition of his wife, reported for duty this morning, the lady being much better.

Burleigh Currier has been transferred from the engineering to the laboratory department of the electric light works. Charles Becker has taken the position in the engineering department which was vacated by Currier.

John Slater bubbles about with great difficulty, having a very sore foot. Friday night a wagon wheel passed over the member, crushing the little toe. Mr. Slater works as usual, notwithstanding his injuries

Car building is increasing and the prospects of lively trade in that line are brightening. Last Saturday the Indiana Car and Foundry company closed a contract to build 500 stock cars for the Northwestern.

The published statement that John Sloan, the ex-passenger conductor on the Pittsburg road, had taken a position on the Findlay road, is an error Mr. Sloan is at Crestline, Ohio, at present and is not engaged in railroading.

There is a heavy movement of west bound freight at present. Yesterday the Pittsburg sent three "lights" east and today four more started in the same direction. The freight consists of iron, coal, coke and merchandise.

The work of converting the Bedford and Switz City from a narrow to a standard gauge road has been commenced. The road is owned by the Monon, which is laying the rails taken up on the Indianapolis division in widening the gauge.

William Haley, formerly a brakeman, has sued the Panhandle company for $10,000, the alleged amount of damage sustained by the sudden starting of a train, whereby Haley was thrown down and severely injured. The case will be tried in the Logansport courts.

E. St. John, recently elected vice president and general manager of the Seaboard Air-line, took charge on the 1st of January, and by circular issued to the agents and employes, all of whom are to be retained, urges them to put forth their best efforts in the company's behalf.

Applicants for work make life almost burdensome to master mechanics and foremen of shops, who are not only bothered at the works, but cannot pass down street without being stopped and importuned for work. Where all the idle mechanics come from is a mystery, as the shops in Fort Wayne are employing nearly as many men as they ever did.

Oil as a locomotive fuel will never come into general use in this country, for the simple reason that there is not enough of it for that purpose. It is stated that the Pennsylvania railroad alone would consume over one-third of the total production of petroleum in the United States were its locomotives to use oil for fuel.

Railway constructions in Indiana for the year 1894 was the smallest in the history of the state during the railway era, there being only sixty-one miles constructed. Of this amount the Findley, Fort Wayne and Western built eighteen miles, the Chicago, Indiana and Eastern twenty-five miles and the Chicago and Southeastern, eighteen miles.

Our wholesale merchants are developing some trade at the stations along the line of the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western road. Agent C. H. Newton said this morning that the freight business was growing wonderfully, and would in time be quite heavy. George Durfee and Christian Belt, traveling men, started over the line this morning in the interest of their respective firms.

The revenue of the Western Union Telegraph company for furnishing the time of day to this country amounted last year to about $1,500,000. The company has a telegraph clock in the naval observatory in Washington. Four minutes before noon the wires of the system all over the United States are cleared of business, and the instant the sun passes the seventy-fifth meridian, electricity carries the news to every city.

An exchange says that the Pennsylvania company has a great surprise in store for the competing lines which have joined issues against the former company. The surprise hinted at is believed to be the abandonment of the mileage book plan altogether and the making of a two-cent a-mile rate to all points on the various branches of the Pennsylvania system. By this plan it is believed travel would increase sufficiently to offset the loss in reducing the rate.

The genial Harry Evans, boss carpenter at the electric light works, and his estimable wife entertained Saturday evening in honor of Mr. Evans' birthday. There were fourteen persons all gentlemen present and the evening was devoted to card playing and listening to music produced by the host. At 11 o'clock a most delicious and substantial supper was served in courses The guests presented Mr. Evans with a silver writing outfit, including ink stand, paper weight and knife.

William C. Scheifer and Miss Maggie Rodabaever were married Christmas at Indianapolis and so quiet were they about it that only a few of their intimate friends have learned of the wedding. Mr Scheifer is a machinist, employed in the Wabash shops, where he reported for duty this morning for the first time since he became a benedict. The bride is also a resident of this city and is quite popular among her acquaintances. She has relatives living in Muncie and the couple spent a portion of their honeymoon in that city.

The news comes from Cedar Rapids and Vinton, Iowa, the headquarters of the Order of Railway Conductors and the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, that all the railways have refused to issue the customary passes to the heads of all labor organizations. If this should prove correct the labor orders will suffer greatly. The grand officers of railway organizations travel constantly, going from one city to another settling grievances, visiting lodges and performing other services. If they are compelled to pay fare the money thus expended will run up into the thousands of dollars during the year.

Fears at Fort Play.

Butte, Mont., Jan. 7.—Peter Breen, District master workman of the Knights of Labor, who went to New Orleans in November to attend the Knights of Labor convention, has not been heard from since his arrival in New Orleans and his friends in Butte feel certain that he has met with foul play.

In Olden Times

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action; but now that it is generally known that Syrupof Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

Late Literary News.

An old-fashioned sea story full of interest and adventure, with a strong love motive, is begun by W. Clark Russell in the January Cosmopolitan. "Onida" succeeds Froude, Gosse, Lang and other distinguished writers with an installment of the "Great Passions of History" series, which has been appearing in The Cosmopolitan. A discussion is aroused by Mr. Edward Bok's article on "The Young Man and the Church," which will consume tons of ink before it is settled. Just preceding the famous Charcot's death he prepared an article for The Cosmopolitan on Pasteur, to be published after Pasteur's death. But Charcot has died first, and so, with the consent of Charcot's executors, the article is given now The present "Theatrical Season in New York" is critically considered by Mr. James S. Metcalfe, editor of Life, and there are stories by Tourgee, Howells and the famous French writer, Francois Coppee.

Literary Note From the Century Co.

The wide spread interest that is felt in the career of Napoleon at this time is very clearly shown by the fact that of the November and December numbers of The Century, containing the opening chapters of Prof. Sloane's new Life, more copies were sold than of corresponding issues for several years past. The January number is already out of print, and a large increase is necessary in the regular February edition.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passage, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucus, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across the forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

Mr. Rhodenbaugh is the proprietor of the barber shop at 237 East Wayne street.

H. W. Kruse and wife, of 275 East Lewis street, entertained a few friends at a "Donkey Party" last Friday evening, in honor of G. A. Harriett, of Grand Rapids.

Mrs. Katie Fysaukle, Masters Janie and Lee and Little Miss Bertha have returned to Wellsville, Ohio, after a brief but pleasant visit with J. B. Olinger and wife of the east end.

C. W. Freese and Mr. Haye, of old Fort, Ohio, were in the city a few days, the guests of Charlie Tindall and wife, of Boone street. They returned home by the overland route, accompanied by Miss Clatonia Tindall, who has been visiting here for some time

The woman's Bible meeting of Wayne street M. E church will commence this week, as formerly, at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. This being the week of prayer, the Wayne street, Berry street and Simpson auxiliaries of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society will improve the occasion by holding a union service of prayer to invoke the blessing of God upon the work of the society for 1895. The ladies of all the Methodist churches are cordially invited to attend whether they belong to an auxiliary or not. This special meeting for prayer will be observed generally throughout the north Indiana conference by the women of the various auxiliaries of the W. F. M. S.

This morning, at 6 o'clock, in Toledo, at the home of the bride, No 2278 Franklin avenue, occurred the marriage of Miss Della Sullivan to Mr. John Fielding, the well known Fort Wayne real estate dealer. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Quigley, of Toledo. The bride is an accomplished and charming lady. She has lived all her life in Toledo, but has often visited friends in Fort Wayne. The groom is one of this city's energetic and solid business men and numbers his friends by the number of his acquaintances. After a brief journey the happy couple will return to this city and be at home to friends at No. 355 South Hanna street after January 14th.

Saturday afternoon, in the parlors of the First Presbyterian church, was held the second meeting of this season of the Woman's Club league, and it was one of the most enjoyable meetings ever held by this association. After the report from the board of directors and library committee and a musical program from the Morning Musical, an address entitled "Unrest" was delivered by Mrs Virginia C Meredith, of Cambridge City. It may be interesting to know that Mrs. Meredith, who is a business woman of much ability, owns a valuable stock farm near Cambridge City, which is under her personal management Mrs Meredith is president of the Indiana Union of Literary clubs, a valued member of the Farmer's Institute and was chairman of the woman's committee on awards at the world's fair. Her address was full of practical thoughts and very helpful. The "unrest" to which she referred is that which characterizes the woman of the nineteenth century and that which makes a woman eager to become thoroughly informed on every subject and thus be able to exercise the best influence in church and society. After the address prettily decorated tea tables were brought into requisition and tea was served by members of different clubs belonging to the league.
